

THOSE WHO PASSED IN EXAMINATIONS

SOUTH PARK GIRL WINS THE GOVERNOR'S MEDAL

Highest Percentage of Successful Candidates in the Nelson District—General Results.

The results of the High school entrance examinations held last month throughout the province show that 273 candidates passed out of 420 who presented themselves for examination.

The examinations were held at Nanaimo, New Westminster, Nelson, Rossland, Vancouver, Vernon, and Victoria, and taking these centres, Nelson has the highest percentage of successful pupils, and Sapperton school has the percentage of the different schools with four entries and four passed.

The Hibben cup for the highest average of marks obtained by any Victoria school was won by the Boys' Central with 74.5, the North Ward school being second with 71.4, and the South Park school third, with 68.6.

The Governor-General's medal for the candidate obtaining the highest number of marks in the examinations is won by Wilhelmina Baxter, of the South Park school, who secured the high number of 908 marks out of the possible 1,200.

Following are the numbers of competitors at the various centres who passed and failed, and the percentages:

GROESOME FIND IN ISLAND INTERIOR

MR. KING DISCOVERS SKELETON OF A MAN

He Had Evidently Died Alone Back Crown Mountain—The Timber Resources of District.

Back of Crown mountain, the one giant pine which towers several thousand feet above sea level almost in the centre of Vancouver island, a poor fellow came to a desolate morning and perhaps two years ago. The skeleton, stripped of its clothing and partially destroyed by panthers and wolves, was found on July 12th by Mike King, of this city, who returned on Saturday night from a month's exploring trip through the interior of the island.

Mr. King, accompanied by an Indian whom he had taken with him from the coast, struck a blaze about ten miles from Butte lake. He examined the blaze, and by its irregular course he concluded that it had been made by a man who had been alone in the woods, and concluded to follow it. He left his pack with the Indian and pushing along the trail was confirmed in his opinion that the blaze had been made by a man unfamiliar with the woods, by the fact that even after striking a stream he continued to cut his way through the woods. About four miles from the point at which he had encountered the trail he came upon a rude camp. About a dozen fish lines had been put along the four stakes, and near them lay the partial skeleton of a man. Nothing was left but the backbone and the ribs, and the knees. Everything below the knees had gone. Half of the left side of the skull was eaten away. One of the ribs had been broken in two, and the bone had knitted together again.

The man lay about ten feet from his bed, and had been lying on his back. Mr. King concluded that he died in his bed, and had been dragged out by panthers and wolves. He had evidently been there for some time before his death, perhaps six or eight days, as the bones were not as fresh as they would be if he had died recently. He had a black rubber coat, a black hat, and a pair of trousers, which were absolutely up to the neck in mud. Two double teeth were missing from the upper jaw on one side of his face.

His outfit consisted of one trying pan, a two-quart pail, a tin, a tin bucket, one butcher knife, a plate, a tin cup, a spoon and three needles, two fish lines, a ball of twine and a tin of soap. Near where his head had lain were a half bottle of Pain Killer, a half bottle of Kennedy's Discovery, and a box of soap. He had no rifle. All his pockets were examined, but they contained nothing of value. His shoes were rotten, and even his shoes had been eaten by animals down to the soles. His shoes had been a pair of rubber shoes, and he had a pair of moccasins in his hands. Mr. King made a rough grave and gave the remains burial.

Mr. King's discovery is a most interesting one, and has attracted much attention. It is believed that the man was a prospector, and that he had been killed by panthers and wolves. THE CELEBRATIONS. Arrangements Reached Between the Societies and Lacrosse Team As To Grounds. Indications are that the programme of amusements for the October celebration of King Edward VII. and Societies' Day on August 9th will be an engaging, varied and entertaining. An outline of the events that will probably mark that occasion has already appeared in these columns. Since that time James T. Kelly and Associates have decided to hold their annual regatta in the morning of that day, making amusements of the afternoon. An elaborate programme is being drawn up for this event, which will be held on the harbor course. Popular with lacrosse mania in the morning, this will make ample amusement for visitors, while the societies' reunion sports at the Caledonia grounds in the afternoon and the illumination, band concerts, etc., in the evening will keep pleasure-seekers employed throughout the day.

Kelly and Associates have decided to hold their annual regatta in the morning of that day, making amusements of the afternoon. An elaborate programme is being drawn up for this event, which will be held on the harbor course. Popular with lacrosse mania in the morning, this will make ample amusement for visitors, while the societies' reunion sports at the Caledonia grounds in the afternoon and the illumination, band concerts, etc., in the evening will keep pleasure-seekers employed throughout the day.

He Had Evidently Died Alone Back Crown Mountain—The Timber Resources of District.

Back of Crown mountain, the one giant pine which towers several thousand feet above sea level almost in the centre of Vancouver island, a poor fellow came to a desolate morning and perhaps two years ago. The skeleton, stripped of its clothing and partially destroyed by panthers and wolves, was found on July 12th by Mike King, of this city, who returned on Saturday night from a month's exploring trip through the interior of the island.

Mr. King, accompanied by an Indian whom he had taken with him from the coast, struck a blaze about ten miles from Butte lake. He examined the blaze, and by its irregular course he concluded that it had been made by a man who had been alone in the woods, and concluded to follow it. He left his pack with the Indian and pushing along the trail was confirmed in his opinion that the blaze had been made by a man unfamiliar with the woods, by the fact that even after striking a stream he continued to cut his way through the woods. About four miles from the point at which he had encountered the trail he came upon a rude camp. About a dozen fish lines had been put along the four stakes, and near them lay the partial
