The Secret of Good Pies

PIE CRUST, more than any other delicacy of the oven, ought to be tempting and appealing to the taste.

You do not eat pie as a nerve tonic or to strengthen your appetite. You eat it for pleasure mostly.

You want it, of course, to taste good, at the same time you want the crust to be light, flaky, wholesome. Now, pie crust properly made from

Royal Household Flour

is always good food, the absolute uniformity of this best of all flours eliminates failure entirely. You get the same delightful results every time and your pies are more healthful and nourishing than if made from ordinary flour.

The reason is that "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" having a larger percentage of high quality gluten, assimilates more readily, is more satisfying than ordinary flour, comes out of the oven flakier, more tender and more digestible.

Be sure to try "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" when next you make pies. It is the finest flour in the world not only for Pastry but for Bread and all family baking.

Kipling as Historian.

"Mr. Rudyard Kipling is about to make his first bow to the public in the role of historian," says the London Daily News. "A School History of England" will be published shortly under the joint names of Mr. C. R. L. Fletcher and Mr. Kipling. It is an open secret that the more solid historical matter will be contributed by the first of these authors while Mr. Kipling will be responsible for the more vivid parts of the narrative and the poems which will supplement the text.

"There will be no fewer than twenty-three ballads which appear under such titles as 'The Roman Centurion,' 'The Pirates of England,' 'Before the Edgehill Fight,' 'The Dutch in the Medway,' 'The French Wars,' 'The Bells and the Queen, 1911.'"

Chapter I. of the new history, which carries the reader from the earliest times to the Departure of the Romans, opens with a poem, entitled "The River's Tale."

"Twenty bridges from Tower to Kew Wanted to know what the River knew, For they were young and the Thames was old, And this is the tale that the River told,

I walk my beat before London Town
Five hours up and seven down,
Up I go and I end my run
At Tide-end-Town, which is Teddington

Down I come with the mud in my hands,
And plaster it over the Maplin Sands,
But I'd have you know that these waters of mine

Were once a branch of the River Rhine,
When hundreds of miles to the East I went,
And England was joined to the Continent.

I remember the bat-winged lizard-birds,
The Age of Ice and the mammoth herds,
And the giant tigers that stalked them down

Through Regent's Park into Camden town,
And I remember like yesterday
The earliest Cockney who came my way.

When he pushed through the forest that lined the Strand,
With paint on his face and a club in his hand.

A Deplorable waste.

Every return of soiling trains, the usual reports of the destruction of forest wealth by fire. These reports always begin before the full wood-rangings forces are on duty, which reveals one serious defect in the generally adopted systems of protection. Scarcely a week passes without a report of serious destruction either in Canada or some of the adjacent States. In this respect Ontario is neither better nor worse than any of the other Provinces or States possessing timber resources. Our fires seem to gain headway with about the average frequency, and our losses bear about the general average proportion to our timber area. There seems an unfortunate tendency toward resignation in this regard. A cynical critic from N. B. recently declared that the intercolonial had burned up the northern and eastern timber, the C.P.R. had burned up the western and southern timber, and the National Transcontinental was preparing to burn up the timber of the interior. It would be most unfortunate if such resignation leads to the neglect of any possible precaution in railway operation, or in any protection against the conditions which make the locomotive a menace.

As with the prevention of disease, it is necessary to consider both exposure and resisting power. The locomotive engines and the fires built by campers, prospectors, lumbermen, construction gangs and settlers are the chief dangers to which our forests are exposed. Their power of resistance depends on the efficiency of the fire ranging service and the freedom of forests from the debris of storms and lumbering operations. The law with regard to the lighting and extinguishing of fires is now fairly well observed. In the matter of equipping locomotives with screens there is room for improvement, and all precautions in this regard should be rigidly enforced. The increasing value of forest wealth and the greater loss from every fire show the wisdom of increasing the fire-rangings staff. The removal of inflammable material from the zone of danger along every line of railway through timbered country has become a necessary precaution. But the greatest danger, and the one involving the most difficult problem, is the debris of lumbering operations.

The virgin forest is almost non-combustible, but the dry tops, branches, and "sawd" left after lumbering operations are so highly inflammable that the prevention of fire is almost impossible. These accumulations give such strength and headway that it may be able to designate and consume great acres of virgin forest. Some States have boldly faced this feature of the problem by requiring the removal of all refuse during lumbering operations. This cannot be done without materially increasing the outlay. But the destruction through exposure to fire will also increase the cost of timber. This Province must decide which is the greater outlay or loss, having regard for both the present or the future. Whichever loss may be greater now, we must be prepared for the time when the cost of removing the debris of lumbering will be less than the loss through exposure to destructive fires. The increased value of timber has come with the increased danger from fires, and the changed situation is not fully appreciated. —Tor. Globe.

Bad Case.

"Why do you borrow trouble?"
"Don't you know?"
"Looks foolish to me."
"It is because I can't borrow money."

Dividing Line.

Taking in a dollar,
Spending ninety-five—
That's the way to prosper;
That's the way to thrive;
On the same wage spending
Dollar, ten or so—
That's the road to worry
And to endless woe.

In your modest living
If you make ends meet
And just save a trifle
You're on easy street.
If they try a little
Just the other way
Then there is the mischief
And such things to pay.

It's not in the earning,
Though that may be small,
But it's in the spending
That you take a fall.
On a walking income
Quite too thin for style
We desire a big side
Every little while.

Such a tiny margin,
Such a slender edge
In between contentment
And the ragged edge,
One spends one more dollar,
One a dollar less,
For the one it's trouble,
For the one success.

Try Greetings for JOB PRINTING;

St. George, N. B.

A terrible race war in the South some day will be the inevitable result of such hideous outrages as the lynching of six negroes Monday in Florida. They were under arrest on a charge of murdering a white man, and their murderers forged an order from the Sheriff, under which the men were handed over. Wholesale murder, plus forgery, does not seem to be a good means of stopping murder.

Pat's Trousers.

An Irishman had a pair of trousers made by a local tailor, who according to fashion made them rather tight, Pat returned with them a day or two after. Says he:

"You hiv made thim trousers far too tight, he jabers, they're tighter than me skin."

"Oh, come, now," said the tailor, that can't be surely. How can they be tighter than your skin?"

"Well," says Pat, "I can sit down in me skin but I can't sit down in thim trousers."
