The evidence of the complainant was given today and the case was adjourned until tomorrow, when other witnesses will be heard. The case is exciting considerable comment in medical and official circles, and has set the profession by the case. Professional jealousy is said to be an element in the quarrel.

It is asserted that Doctor McNally, with Doutor Burnett, of Sussex, drove up to the guards at the quarantine line and said he had an order from Doctor Fisher permitting him to pass. Doctor Fisher says he gave no order permitting Doctor McNally and Doctor Burnett to pass on this occasion.

The Manzer woman had all the symptoms of smallpox at a later stage. The witness then gave a history of the smallpox cases in that section of York county. Mrs. Manzer's was a marked case of smallpox and he considered it necessary to quarantine all the houses between Collings and Manzer, both inclusive. He had about a quarter mile of road roped off and placed guards at the ropes. The first time he visited the Manzer house he did not think it was smallpox, and took no extraordinary precautions.
