A CRITICAL ARTIST. [Canadian Churchman.]

When in London, Eng., some time ago, the following story was related by Rev. T. H. ———: "A certain young artist visited one of the famous old art galleries in Europe, and viewed the priceless pictures of Raphael, Mu-rillo, and others of the famous 'old masters.' He criticized these famous masterpieces freely, passing many con temptuous remarks concerning them. At last he went up to the aged curator and scornfully remarked: 'I don't think much of these old masters.' 'Young man,' replied the old curator, 'it is not these old masters who are on trial, but the artistic taste of the visitors." So we would say concerning the Word of God. It is not Moses and Paul and offer inspired writters who cient to operate the road, and appealed to the city for an increase.

In 1919 the company urged more insistently that an increase was necessary, and carried on an extensive advertising campaign to this end. It succeeded in having a bylaw submitted at the municipal election.
