The Old Canoe.

Where the rocks are gray and the shore is steep
And the waters below look dark and deep,
Where the rugged pine, in its lofty pride,
Leans gloomily over the rocky side,
Where the reeds and the rushes are long and rank
And the weeds grow thick on the winding bank;
Where the shadow is heavy the whole day
Through
Lies at its moorings the old canoe.
The useless paddles are idly dropped
Like a sea bird's wings that the storm has lopped,
And crouched on the railing one o'er can,
Like the folded arms when the work is done;
While busily back and forth between
The spider weaves his silvery screen,
And the solemn owl, with his dull "too too,"
Settles down on the side of the old canoe.
The stern half sunk in the silty wave,
Rots slowly away in its living grave,
And the green moss creeps o'er its dull decay.
Hiding the mouldering dustaway,
Like the hand that paints o'er the tomb a flower
Or the ivy that mantles the fallen tower,
Like the weary march of the hands of time
That meet and part at the moon-tide chime;
And the shore is kissed at each turn anew
By the dripping bow of the old canoe.

A TALK TO YOUNG MEN.

Sam Small Begins Out With Strong Points for Young Men.
Speaking to 2,000 young men at Farnell Hall, Chicago, the other night, Sam Small said:
What a precious recollection it must be to a young man to look back to his boyhood's home, if he feels that he has followed that advice. Perhaps some of us have already experienced the terrible results of disobeying the laws of God. Have you ever been aroused from peaceful slumber by the roar of a terrible fire at midnight? You could see the devouring flames leap to the sky, and in their fury consuming everything before them; you could hear the creaking of the walls and of falling timbers and the shouts of the firemen. You heard the cry, "Has everyone in the building been saved?" No! there is one man there, and he is seen standing on a full platform which the fire was eating from under him, while the flames wound around him. While you gazed in horror a brave fireman appeared and rescued him. I was at one time in that man's horrible condition, and I cried out for the only one that could save me—God. What put me in that perilous condition? I had neglected the commandments of my father and mother. I was ambitious and wanted to be rich, as all appear to want to be in these days. People imagine that money will make them happy. I would rather be the young man with $50 a month, living within my means, than have $5,000 and lead the life of a drunkard and debauchee. I associated with the proud and the rich at one time, but it was in the association of some of the highest in the land, politicians and leaders, that I got the drunk and felt the meanest. The Bible code of morals is the standard by which men are judged in this world and for eternity.

The young man who goes into a gambling-house generally wins at first. He is drawn on. But do you suppose that the gambler sits there to enrich the foot and the sucker? You call yourself a gentleman, but you are no more so than the gambler. Neither are you more honest, for you go into a gambling-house to rob the proprietor and get money which did not belong to you. Now as to drinking. I have nothing personally to say against any saloon-keeper, but as long as they are in that business I am against them to the bitter end. You are responsible for their soul-damning trade. If you will keep away from these places they will close them up.

Then there is the sin of lewdness. Young men go to vile haunts because there is novelty and secrecy about them. No young man who has a mother or a sister should be seen in a low place. In going there you degrade yourself to the level of those there. When you enter those doors for the purpose of debauchery you invite other men with thoughts as vile as the danger it is possible to incur of becoming the host of tapeworms, trichinae, and every other parasite. To sell the compound to a person who purchases it as better ought to be made a punishable offence, and the manufacture or importation of it ought to be strictly prohibited.

Why He got Married.
Silas is a character, who means well. He tries to earn a living and "clunks around" as odd jobs and chores and what ever he can get to do, but he works a good deal and he talks with a painful drawl that is very suggestive of that state of natural foolishness which his ilk call "born there." Silas came to meet a fiancee the other day for one of his patrons in the suburban village where he belongs, with a peculiar air of festivity about him. He had on a bright new neck-tie of blue Japanese silk, and his honest face was covered by an expansive grin all the time that he was receiving his orders.

"You seem happy, Silas," said Mr. Blank, with some curiosity, when he had finished about the fence.
"Yess," drawled Silas. "Yess, I've been a gettin' married this mornin'!"
"Married? You? Why, Silas, man alive, what on earth have you gone and done that for? You can't support your self as it is!"
"Wall," said Silas, "I ken pooly nead support myself, 'n' I think it's a durn pity if she can't help none!"—Boston Record.

F. E. Ireland and the Terms of Union.
Mr. Sullivan, premier of Prince Edward Island, and Mr. Donald Ferguson, provincial secretary, have returned from England. It will be remembered that Messrs. Sullivan and Ferguson visited Ottawa six weeks ago, and interviewed the premier with reference to the fulfillment of the terms of union entered into between the Dominion and that province in the year 1874. They did not receive satisfaction from Sir John, and consequently were obliged to lay their grievances before the secretary for the colonies. It is understood they received a satisfactory answer from Earl Granville and that the terms of union will have to be carried out to the letter.

A Wide Range.—A wide range of painful affections may be met with Haged's Yellow Oil. James M. Lawson, of Woodville, Ont., speaks of it in high terms for rheumatism, lame back, sprains, and many painful complaints too numerous to mention. It is used internally or externally.

"Whooop it Up."—Probably one of the most difficult complaints to doctor is whooping cough. When treated by ordinary means the poor victim is left to whoop it up as best he can. Haged's Fectoral Balm gives relief in this as well as in all throat, bronchial, and lung troubles.

The Girl that Everybody Likes.
Girls, you needn't be beautiful to become general favorites. The plainest girl I ever saw was the favorite in my native town. Everybody liked her. Beautiful? O, no, she is not beautiful—that is outside, but inside she is beautiful. Nobody thinks of calling her beautiful. Not one of a dozen can tell whether her eyes are black or blue. If you should ask them to describe her they would only say, "she is just right," and there it would end. She is a merry-hearted, fun-loving, bewitching maiden, without a spark of envy or malice in her whole composition. She enjoys herself, and wants everybody else to do the same. She has always a kind word and a pleasant smile for the oldest man or woman; in fact, I can think of nothing she resembles more than a sunbeam, which brightens everything it comes in contact with. All pay her marked attention, from rich Mr. Watts, who lives in a mansion on the hill, to negro Sam the sweep. All look after her with an admiring eye and say to themselves, "She is just the right sort of a girl!" The young men of the town vie with one another as to who shall show her the most attention, but she never encourages them beyond being simply kind and jolly, so no one can call her a flirt; so, indeed, the young men all deny such an assertion as quickly as she.

"Do girls love her, too?" I asked.
"Yes, wonderful to relate, girls like her, too; for she never delights in hurting their feelings or saying spiteful things behind their backs. She is always willing to join in their little plans and to assist them in any way. They go to her with their love affairs, and she manages adroitly to lose Willie or Peter and drop a good word for Ida or Jennie until their little difficulties are all patched up and everything goes on smoothly again, thanks to her. Old ladies say she is 'delightful.' The sly witch, she knows how to manage them. She listens patiently to complaints of rheumatism or neuralgia, and then sympathizes with them so heartily that they are more than half cured. But she cannot always be with us."
"Then she finally gets married?"
"Yes. A young man comes from a
