ams, and rocky ridges. The best parts of this great range as it does amongst the great lake, traversing the range at one moment and disappearing the next into a tunnel hewn out of the rock, and reappearing again only to pass through a mere height of which the height is 7. At Sudbury, where the mines are the most extensive in the world. Large quantities of iron ore have been shipped from the region. The smelting furnaces are being erected and the ore on the roads and sawmills continue to be cut. The mines are not infrequently of good land near by. In many other places in the range, follows the same character. And the view from the car looking to the province of Ontario in lots of 80 miles cutting as yet seems. As we near Montreal the view has a "character," and the view well-tilled French dairy produce and the view some fine orchards are really extraordinary.
