BOER WAR LEADER

A Pacifist Who Was Ready to Fight for His Country.

There is a grim irony in the fact that the brilliant soldier who unscrathed through the hottest fights of the South African War (except for a legacy of rheumatism), and who had intended to accompany the South African Expeditionary Force to the assistance of the Empire, should be killed at this particular time by the bullet

He was, from first to last, a pacifist, but a pacifist prepared to fight for his country to the last breath when fighting became inevitable. He was one of the stoutest opponents of President Kruger and his war policy, but one of his loyalest generals when
