The report of Dr. W. B. Moore shows that there were no deaths from contagious or infectious diseases during the year 1900. There have been several cases of fever in one section of the town some distance from the centre the origin being from drainage. The doctor does not believe that at present a complete and general system of sewerage for the whole town is absolutely necessary, but short sewers, tapping the congested central area, and discharging into the Cornwallis, are both necessary and practicable.

Fined For Selling Alum Baking Powder

At Bradford, on Thursday, Walter E. Sugden, grocer, Wakefield road, Bradford, was summoned for selling adulterated baking powder. Mr. Herbert Hinkinson, deputy town clerk, who prosecuted, said the inspector called at the defendant's shop and purchased samples of baking powder. There were two kinds on sale. The article described as the best was sold at 2d. for four ounces, and the cheaper kind was sold at 2d. for half a pound. The cheaper sample when analysed was found to be adulterated with 20 per cent. of alum. The use of alum in making bread was injurious to health, and it was used as a cheap substitute for tartaric acid. Alum bread liberated the gas and made the bread rise, but it was injurious to children. The Bradford Corporation were determined to put a stop to these adulterations, which pressed especially hard upon the poor. The defendant said that he purchased the baking powder ready made up in packets, and did not know that it was adulterated. A fine of £2 and costs was imposed.—London Grocer, Dec. 11.
