There Ransbegan a business of teaming, in a small way, to and from the unites near Sacragento. This business, which developed into the most extensive trucking business in the state, he continued until some 12 or 15 years ago, when he sold out his interest and removed to Los Angeles, where he engaged in the fruit business and soon had, it is said, the largest vineyard in the world. He built a large hotel and engaged in other enterprises at his new home. He died about six, months ago, leaving property estimated to be worth about $1,400,000. Rano had four children, one of whom, when visit. and tools.

About 12 years ago he joined his wife's father in California. After a sojourn there of a year and a half he returned East, and has since lived in Hopkinton, following his trade of painter and farmer. Some eight years ago Mrs. Rano separated from her husband. The courts allowed her alimony of $200,000. Mr. Rano again married, this time a woman in the remainder of the painter and farmer.

M. Ferry has written to his seconds as follows: "I remain ever ready to give satisfaction to Gen. Boulanger, or to accept arbitration." Blacksmith Coal lowed her alimony of $200,000. Mr. Rano again married, this time a woman who had been twice previously married, and when he died his will bequeathed $5000 to each of the four children by his first wife and the balance of the entire estate to his second wife and her children. A suit was brought by the legitimate fermale heirs to break the will, on the ground of undue influence being used when Rano was near his death and mentally unfit to execute a will, and intimated that he had been dosed into a pliable condition. operation haus vessely and for if not done until the wood gets hard and requires cutting it had better be left altogether, as by that time the under leaves will have been so blanched by the dense top growth that they will fall off when fully exposed. We go over our bushes directly the leading shoots are about six inches long and pinch the tops out; the lower leaves then get strong and remain on the bushes all the season, and out; the lower leaves then get strong and remain on the bushes all the sasson, and the buds at their base get very much stronger than if the strength were allowed to rush up into the wood, which at the winter pruning will be out off. There is really very little winter pruning to dissummer prusing or pinching is attended to, as the young wood that is left gets so completely covered with flower buds that one is loath to cut any of it away. Red and white currants are apparently the most benefited by close pruning, but black varieties are also much improved by stopping the leading shoots that are has high as are intended to be left of fruiting, the young growth from the base for suvplying new fruit-bearing shoots being left intact. It is simply a question of concentrating the forces of the bush on fruit or useless wood production.
