

Newfoundland's
Feeling of Neglect
BRITISH TRADERS' INDIFFERENCE.

Mrs. William R. Warren, wife of the prime Minister of Newfoundland, who has returned to Newfoundland from this country, states in an interview that all Newfoundlanders are supporting the Empire Exhibition most whole-heartedly.

"The Newfoundland Pavilion," she added, "will be worthy and illustrative of Newfoundland. In it will be displayed the various products and resources of our country. Of late years the tendency of trade has unfortunately been to drift away from the Mother Country, so that the Exhibition comes as a specially appropriate time. It should serve to emphasize afresh the importance of impulsive commerce.

To some extent, I must confess this falling off has been due to the action, or rather lack of action, of British manufacturers themselves. Geographically, of course, our closeness to Canada and the United States makes it only natural that our trade with those countries should expand, but the fact remains that we have been rather neglected of late by British business men, who have not pushed their wares in Newfoundland to anything like the fullest extent.

"It is the old story of Mahomet and the mountain. Instead of British manufacturers sending out their commercial travellers to drum up business here, we have to go to the States and to secure orders, as do the Americans and Canadians, we have to send buyers to Great Britain in the endeavour to retain our business connections. This indifference to our trade is well illustrated by the fact some British firms which are not represented at all in Newfoundland have agencies in Toronto and other Canadian cities which are even further from us than London is. Our importers are therefore compelled to purchase from these agents, with the result that the goods are sent from London to Toronto, and then travel back to St. John's, thus multiplying by half the distance for which freightage has to be paid. The British Empire Exhibition will, I think, have the effect of putting straight many errors of this sort, and of bringing the business communities of each portion of the Empire into much closer relationship."—Yorkshire Post, March 6.

A Plea of Human Sympathy

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—Please allow me a little space in your esteemed paper for a few remarks on an ordeal I went through on the night of the 27th ult. My wife being in a delicate condition, I engaged a Nurse, who visited her on three occasions and knew my wife's condition perfectly well. On Thursday night the Nurse's services were required. I then went to her house. Her husband came to the door, and told me that she was sick in bed and could not come. I then asked her whom she could recommend to me. She said she did not know of anybody except a woman on Flower Hill. I then went to her, but found that she had been called out. I then went to another. Her excuse was: "You don't have me engaged so I won't come." I went from there to another in Fleming Street. She came to the window and after consulting with some person in the room she told me she couldn't come as there was no person to look after her. I then proceeded to Hamilton Street to find the Nurse there a cripple and unable to come. There was nothing left for me to do now but call on Dr. Carnell, and he responded to the call. Now three hours had elapsed since I started. The result was Dr. Carnell found my wife at a critical stage, and my pen fails to express my gratitude to him for the exercise of his skill which brought her through thus far. The baby only lived four hours. No doubt had the Nurse whom I had engaged come the baby would have lived. Now, sir, every week we see the report of the S.P.A. credit into that Society. I was wondering couldn't there be a provision for human beings as a stop-gap to some of the so-called Nurses. The one in question was on her hands yesterday and again to-day. Some of them will be a bit more sympathetic in the future. Thanking you for space, I remain, Yours truly,
JOHN SOPER.
