THE CANDIDATE.

There is probably little in romantic literature that surpasses the meteoric career of William Jennings Bryan. who was yesterday nominated at Chicago for the highest office within the gift of the American people. The constitutional age of presidents is 35 years. Bryan is 36, and if elected in November, he will be the youngest President that the White House has ever known. He is essentially a selfmade man, and a man of the people. His principal education was gained in the public schools of Salem, Ill., where his parents resided. During the succeeding six years he received an academic training. The bent of his mind was toward the law, and it was in the office of Lyman Trumbull that he laid the foundation of his legal career. In 1890, when only 30 years of age, he was elected a member of the House from the first district of Nebraska. During the consideration of the single

Mr. Bryan is about the medium in height. His face is cleanly shaven, and in appearance he resembles the great Pennsylvania commoner, Samuel J. He is a strict churchman, and on several occasions during his residence in this city ad-"I beg your pardon," she exclaimed solicitously, "I didn't mean to step on your foot." > CHOICE. London, July 11.-Commenting on the action of the Chicago convention, the Standard says that the only alternative for the honest money Democrats is to rally to the support of McKinley, who now alone represents the forces of honesty and fair financial dealings. The paper assumes Mc-

> Kinley's election, and says it fore-sees that Great Britain will have to face downright commercial hostility. It concludes by saying that the col-lapse of the Democracy, and the triumph of McKinleyism will not gladden the hearts of Englishmen. The Daily News says that Bryan's views are great nonsense; nevertheless he is a perfectly logical bimetallist. McKinley is almost certain to win. Anyhow, he is sound on the money question, despite his rampant protectionism.
