Last Asgust he was seized with a stroke of apoplexy, but soon recovered. Since then he has taken frequent walks in the streets and was thought to be getting on nicely. Last Monday morning however he was stricken down again, and remained in a low state until vesterday morning. From that time till his death in the evening he remained unconscious.

The judge was a native of Scotland, and probably over 80 years of age. He must have come to Canada from his native Scotland shortly after 1830. He was for years in business before being called to the bar about 1837. He practised in Kingston. An active Free churchman, he always opposed Queen's college. When he had attained considerable reputation as a lawyer he was made judge of the county of Frontenac and filled that position with ability for years. Then he resigned and came to Toronto, where he opened a law office, and was again appointed county judge, this time of York, and also judge of the maritime court, had considerable weight with a jury in pleading a cause, and as a consequence was The judge was a native of Scotland, and had considerable weight with a jury in pleading a cause, and as a consequence was employed in a number of prominent trials. Major Phipps' Case in Appeal. Arguments in the extradition proceedings of Major Phipps, late superintendent of the Philadelphia almshouse, on charges of forging, were commenced in the court of appeal yesterday at Osgoode hall. The prisoner was brought before the county court judge on September 26, 1882, for extradition, and after a strenuous effort on behalf of his counsel, the judge de-cided that he should be extradited. The case was then appealed to the queen's bench, the prisoner's counsel arguing that the offence was not forgery within the meaning of the Ashburton treaty. The court however decided that it was, and that court however decided that it was, and that the prisoner should be remanded for extradition. The prisoner as a last resort now appeals to the court of appeal. The case is being argued at great length by the counsel and will probably be finished to-day. D. McCarthy, Q. C., B. B. Osler, Q. This is none the less starting when it is remembered that not five per cent of patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefited, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissue, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination—this accomplished, he claims the catarrh is practically cured and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by hint two years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. were afflicted with some form of Head, Throat or Lung trouble; and the vast number cured from all parts of the Dominion of Canada since the organization of our Institute in Toronto can attest to the fact that ours is the true system of treatment. It is true there are many imitators, as there will always be in any good thing, but the public must keep their eyes open and not be deceived by unprincipled men but consult only the right person and place, if they hope for satisfaction in the treatment of their diseases.

If possible call personally for an examination, but if impossible to do so write for "List of Questions" and "Medicai Treatise." Address
