OUR GRANITES GET THE TANKARD

Presents the Trophy. 1st 2nd

The Great Contest Is Over.
The great Tankard contest is over and the prize goes to our, own Granites.

The favorites ran the gauntlet of Group majorities. Their career in the finals was by Dalton that brought the Granites victory.

Williamson and Bertram were the slower curlers, and the other rink got through three ends ahead. Then the Granites were two up. At end 20 Dalton was six behind, but, wonderful to relate, made them all in the next. He was lying three shots when Wardell fluted and gave him two more. He drew the sixth amidst tumults of applause. Williamson got two on the 20th, putting the Granites up four.

Curling Extraordinary,
The next end saw some marvelously ac curate shooting. Gale sent the first the ilins put one on the tee. Gale knocked it out. Collins slugged it straight. Badenach was next and did the trick. Steele came next, banged the Granite and laid in front. Badenach was again equal to the emergency and slugged his opponent out. Steele made Badenach was again edual to the made and slugged his opponent out. Steele made the 7th straight bull's eye and wicked to one side, Bertram had the chance to knock out two Granite stones with his last and lay four, but he missed, and Williamson counted one.

The Granites were taking no chances, and the next end raised everything out of the rings. The first ithree Dundas stones were around the tee. Badenach put two of them to the wall and when the end was over there was only one stone inside. It belonged to Dundas and was on the outside ring. They were welcome to it The Granites had four to the good and were Tankard winners for '94.

It was the general opinion, that the play was the finest ever seen in a final contest and that the 16 men engaged therein have no superiors at the noble winter pastime.

His Excellency was dressed in heavy furs, and, with a merry twinkle in his eye, remarked that they were all brother curlers and he was delighted to perform the pleasant ceremany. It was a keen contest, admirably fought out. Curling was one of the games that caused no heart burns, and he could pleasurably present the Tankard to the Toronto Granites and heartily call for cheers for the victors. President R. "Why, old fellow," said George, "you're just a little down on your luck. Now, I know that Miss—has only one fault to find with you, and that's the outrageous size of your feet. Everybody laughs at them, and she objects. Don't fret, but she will get over the disappointment of not seeing Irving, but your feet—never! Now, what I want to tell you is, that there's no fake about the sale of boots at two-fourteen yonge-street. I tell you, they're almost giving them away. Why, beautiful piccadilly sewed lace boots for one dollar. Take my tip and get a pair of guinane brothers' my tip and get a pair of guinane brothers' piccadilly boots at once, and also take good piccadilly boots at once, and also take good care to show her your feet. I'll bet she forgets all about Irving." "Is there any midnight prowling or number business about it?" asked Alfred. "No, sir; everyone is treated alike in that house, and they never ask their clerks to sell after 6 o'clock unless on Saturdays. So, good-bye, and remember—act on my tip or bad's begun and worse is to follow."

"They're all Irving-struck!" sighed George, as he wandered sadly towards Yonge-street.

Ross Coghlan Next Week. At the Grand Opera House on Thursday evening next Miss Rose Coghlan, supported by one of the strongest dramatic companies ever organized in this country, begins a short engagement, presenting Mr. Oscar Wilde's latest social satire, "A Woman of No Importance," and Merrivale and Grove's famous comedy, "Forget-Me-Not." Mr. O. B. Sheppard received the following letter from Detroit on Thursday:

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 14, 1894.

"A Woman of No Importance," which is underlined for Thursday and Friday evenunderlined for Thursday and Friday evenings and Saturday matines, was the success of the past season in London. The play made a remarkable hit in the British metropolis and was talked about in all the fashionable drawing rooms. In this play Mr. Wilde satrifizes English society and teaches a lesson. It is said to contain more epigrams and bright witty lines than any half dozen modern comedies. Among her associates are Misses's Effle Shannon, Ada Dyas, Dion Boucicault, Kate Denin Wilson, Winona Shannon, Norah Lamison and Messrs, John T. Sullivan, Aubrey Boucicault, Thomas Whiffen, Robert Fischer, Grant Stewart, Edgar Norton and Edwin James.
