

An exquisite centerpiece, No. 616, is made of pale blue silk with a border of lace, the braid being fine white Duchesse, and the stitches in blue silk to match the center. Another novelty in this charming little creation is the introduction into the lace of medallions of white on which are embroidered forget-me-nots.

In doilies, those extremely useful adjuncts to the attractive dining table, there is something new to delight the heart of the housekeeper. No. 611 illustrates the rose doily, and No. 612 the lily. The same idea may be carried out in the violet, the tulip, or any flower preferred. Flemish braid and the ordinary lace stitches are employed, the outer edge being finished plain or with the loop edge as preferred.

The use of doilies corresponding with the floral scheme for decorating the table will at once suggest itself in this connection,—violet doilies for a violet luncheon, those of rose design for a rose dinner. The color scheme might be intensified by substituting violet or rose color silk for linen thread in the lace stitches.

For the toilet table the pincusion in No. 622 is dainty and neat, and may be made to harmonize exquisitely with the color tone of its surroundings. The satin covering should be of the color prevailing in the room. Over this is fastened white net with a simple border of lace, the stitches being done in silk floss of the same color as the satin body. A net ruffle with Picot braid edge, and small ribbon bows at the corners complete this attractive accessory of the toilet table.
