

As far as Toronto is concerned, the Report of the Milk Commission shows the necessity of the work of inspection, because, "Exclusive of West Toronto and other recently annexed districts, Toronto consumes 2,336 eight-gallon cans a day, from approximately 900 farms, within a radius not exceeding forty miles."

The importance of a supply of milk suitable for infants is also discussed, and a recommendation made that the municipalities should aid in maintaining milk depots for infants.

The recommendation that, in cities of 50,000 population, milk should not be sold in shops, except in bottles or sealed packages, would slightly increase the cost of milk to consumers; but is the surest way by which pure milk sent from a proper dairy farm can be kept pure and uncontaminated after it has been marketed. Besides, if a sample of milk is found on analysis to be dirty or diluted, it can be traced to the bottler, who should be obliged, by law, to place his stamp on every bottle of milk filled at his shop or dairy farm, as the case may be.

Gifts to the University of Toronto

As the result of discussion of the matter between them, the executors of the Massey Estate have written to the Governors of the University of Toronto, stating that the estate will bear the cost of erecting, as a memorial to the late Hart A. Massey, three buildings, to be of stone and of Gothic architecture, one to contain all that is necessary for the Young Men's Christian Association, and to be administered by them precisely as if built on the University grounds by themselves; a second building, probably of similar size and design, to contain the rooms necessary for the Students' Union, the Athletic Association, and for other purposes in connection with student life. Between the rear part of these two buildings, built so as to leave a lawn or court, possibly closed in front by a wall with a gable, there
