

In assessing possible disciplinary action, it is very important that managers acquaint themselves with the relevant record of the employee to ensure that any decision is based on the fullest appreciation of the employee's circumstances, including past performance and conduct. This will ensure continuity in following up on prior employee behaviour and/or misconduct.