For Firemen of No. 1 Hall Four Overcome Fighting Blaze in Cigar Factory.

Lieut. Andy Fergusson of No. 1 fire

Saturday afternoon at about 3.30 o'clock, at 107 East Richmond-st.

The fire started in the basement of the factory and dense volumes of smoke were coming out of all the windows when the firemen from No. 1 station arrived. They broke in the door and sought to get at the heart of the fire. They did too, but they did not remain there long. Staggering thru the window they came, and had no sooner reached the sidewalk than they went, severally down in a heap and had to be carried into the fire hall, contiguous to Taylor's factory. Lieut. Fergusson was in the worst condition. He was insensible a few seconds after coming out of the window, and first aid methods had to be administered. It was 20 minutes before he was resuscitated. The other three men were in a nof much worse plight. They became deathly ill and had to be worked on for considerable time before they could sit up again.

There was no need for a doctor.

There was no need for a doctor. Each fireman was a doctor in himself, and seemed to know exactly what to do in aiding their stricken comrades. The worked like Trojans and between assisting their fellows and extinguishing the blaze, were kept going all the time. The fire itself did not amount to much. It started in the basement, but from what cause is not known. The damage done was to leaf tobacco that was stored in the basement.

Fred Coles, who owns the building at the rear of 399 Queen-st. contiguous to the Bedding Company's premises, will lose a few hundred dollars, as his place was burned or damaged by water. Only a thin wooden partition separated his place of business from the Bedding Company.

The fire was caused by spontaneous combustion in the southeast corner of the building, among closely packed and sweaty mattress stuffing. P. C. Dunn, 277, was the first to see the blaze and he sent in the call to the fire station. The smoke was dense and the firemen had to be relieved often. S. Lavin, 349 College-st., owns the building itself are covered by insurance. The total loss will aggregate between $6000 and $7000.

The car was going south on Spadina avenue and witnesses say the led rushed accuses the street, giving apparently little heed to the moving vehicles about him.

Another motor hurried the unconscious and deligious youngster to Grace Hospital, where he was immediately moved to the operating room. The lad was badly bruised and his head was gashed.
