Extensive Improvements for Convenience of Patrons at Grand -Opens August 27.

Among the improvements made in local playhouses during the vacation period, none have been more expensive or extensive than those carout in the Grand Opera House. able house in the city, opens for the regular season on Aug. 27 theatregoers will be surprised that such a large amount of work could be accomplished in such a short time.

Two days after the house closed last son, on June 4, a staff of carpenters, bricklayers and laborers commenced the emodelling of the interior, under the supervision of C. J. Gibson as architect, Joseph Corcoran, carpenter contractor, and George Witchall as mason contractor. As soon as the work opened up it was found that in order to complete accident. the contract in time for the opening of the season it would be necessary to father of Edgar Soule, manager of the Waterdown branch of the Traders' workmen were engaged, with the result that the familiar old playhouse will be in readiness for the opening on Aug. 27. An entire new balcony and galle y have been constructed, and the lower floor extended toward the back, giving a wide promenade across the auditorium.

Filtering Basins.

Evidence was given at the waterworks investigation this evening to show that one reason for the agitation against the filtering basins was the discharge of J. Lottridge, the caretaker, two years ago. Mr. Lottridge's relatives made the charge, and they declared that for the past two years the left of the foyer, and adjoining are the lavatories, in which has been installed the latest plumbing, including all the conveniences so necessary in a theatrical structure. In the inside foyer on the left is the ladies' retiring-room, furnished and decorated in a lavish manner. On the right, and inside the theatre proper, is a room for checking cloaks and wraps. This has been found necessary, for in the past a great deal of inconvenience was noticed in obtaining garments in the outside foyer, especially in the cold weather, when the audience was being dismissed and all the exit doors were open.

basins had never been so well looked after as they have been during the past two years. Mr. Birrell tavors the present system.

William Satts and Wm. Johnston, Indians, were arrested to-night on the charge of stealing a watch from Edward Henry.

Two young fenows in sporty clothes were arrested here to-day on the charge of swindling both Hamilton and Toronto business men. They give the names of Michael Lawry and Frank Kennedy, and their game was to gather money in the name of a
