enough Liberal votes to redeem North It was the plan of campaign upon which the Conservative candidate entered three years ago. The The speaker believed he had always secured many Conservative votes; but in the last campaign there had been uttered falsehoods without parallel, some so astonishing that one would wonder how anyone could conceive them. His policy had been to refrain from taking any notice of those falsehoods, and the result was he had been elected by a majority of over 200, having polled a larger vote than had ever been given for a Liberal candidate in the riding, dometimes the personalities of his oponents were very disgusting, almost humiliating for him to endure. Charges of Corruption.

Mr. Davis then took up the charges of crooked work in the campaign. The charges emanated from one source. They were stated in a most bold and unblushing way without any evidence of proof to sustain them. A protest was entered, but he had said nothing about it, and proposed to make the best of the circumstances. Both can-didates were examined, and then came the deal for the settlement of the pro-test. When he saw the two-line paragraph in The Globe of January 6 that the protest had been settled he was one for its appearance. It was a pure accident, but the Conservative papers started out to make political capital that nothing was to be said until after the by-elections. The News meanwhile had stated that he had resigned, but laid particular stress on the fact that he had not yet resigned, hence the Conservative papers tried to create a wrong impression.

When Mr. Lennox was asked why was absolutely untrue. He did not think the public understood how economical of the truth the Conserv candidate was on the political plat-form, and nobody would take any statement he would make for the truth unless verified by good authority.
Here followed the type-written statement of the minister

What the Minister Says, "As the petition and cross-petition in the North York election trial were dismissed by the judges at Osgoode Hall on Saturday last, without costs I am now at liberty to make a full explanation to the electors of North ork as to the arrangements by his end was reached and about which. during the past few weeks, many statements of a more or less erroneous character have been made in the

It is obvious that the result could only have been brought about by mutual understanding between the Conservative candidate and myself, and that understanding was arrived at in the following way: On the morning of the 2nd inst. we met on the train coming to Toronto, and, in conversation about other matters, I broached the question of the protest. expressing my regret that it seemed necessary to keep alive the bitterness and strife of the late campaign, and expressed my willingness to mode of settlement could not be are rived at to avoid the conditions above indicated. He acquiesced in the de sirability of the proposal and expressed his willingness to discuss the question in a fair spirit. It was finally agreed to lay the whole matter before Judge Morgan as a mutual friend, and, on arriving in the city, we met at his office for that purpose.

"In stating to the judge the object of our visit it was clearly set forth that the basis upon which negotiations would proceed was, first, to avoid the bitterness and rancor which would surely result from the trial, no mat-ter what the result would be as affect- should be frankly placed in possession surely result from the trial, no mating the seat, and, secondly, the enormous cost incident to a trial of this "The judge informed me that hi

Would have missed the opportunity of exposing that in the courts, the result of which would mean that not only would have been opened but that the Liberal party would have been opened but that the Liberal party would have been opened but that the Liberal party would have been placed at a great disadvantage in a new election. The $800 he paid to Mr. Lennox for excess of costs was "a mere nothing." It was also worth considering that there were a great many electors in North York who do not believe in litigation, and their feelings should be consulted. He had been accused by his opponent of acting-the coward, but he never knew a candidate to show the coward more than, his opponent had done. He was not sorry for having adopted the present course, and would do it over again.

"We have known him as a resi dent of the riding from his boyhood days. His character and conduct have always been above reproach, and, from our knowledge of the methods pursued by both him and his opponent in the last election campaign, we have no hesitation in stating that Mr. Davis' campaign would bear the most favorable comparison with that of the Whitney

"We feel, also, that North York has been signally honored by representation in the cabinet councils of the province, and no Minister of the Crown has discharged his duty with greater ability or with more general satisfaction to the Province of Ontario than the representative of North York, the Hon. the Commissioner of Crown Lands, and we pledge to Mr. Davis in his
