BOURASSA AND THE CONSERVA-TIVE PARTY. The joy unfeigned and undisguised

of certain Conservative papers in the and the man who boasts his hostility attendant luminary in the firmament of Quebec provincial politics, worthy public attention. The more so because the entrance of these gentle men into their new sphere of activity was aided and abetted by Conservative politicians, Federal and Provincial, and because their appearance was accompanied by the unmourned eclipse of the Conservative party in the Quebec Legislature.

No Conservative candidate ran any constituency contested by Mr. Bourassa or his avowed supporters. Members of the Federal Opposition appeared in constituencies throughout the province in aid of Mr. Bourassa's candidates, and the whole party machinery, Federal and Provincial, was employed on behalf of those candidates. Such power as Mr. Bourassa has attained, therefore, he attained with the enthusiastic assistance of the Conservative party leaders. Federal and Provincial.

More, the triumph of Mr. Bourassa was accompanied by the extinction of Quebec Conservatism as a provincial force, if, indeed, the effectiveness of the party was not deliberately sacrificed that the way might be made clear for Mr. Bourassa. The provincial leader of the party went down in mourned. There is no suggestion of securing another constituency for finish politically.

Meantime the advent of Mr. Bourassa is hailed as a party triumph. The Ottawa Citizen declares that "on Monday a notable increase was made of Reval, where King Edward and the in re-establishing Conservatism in Czar Nicholas have been in conferthe Liberal stronghold of Quebec." Women Theater-Goers Were in Scramble—Police Helpless in the Rout.

New York, June 15 .- Saturday was public, writes T. P. O'Connor, M.P. My the day set for the distribution of Merry Widow hats at the matinee of "The Merry Widow" at the New Amdandy riot, which left behind it a playhouse strewn with back hair puffs, baby pins and all those things which come off easily.

Now, these hats are just twentyeight inches in diameter, and each was inclosed in a regular hat box. The train presented a cheerful and attractive management did not figure that the salmon 50-cent seaters deserved souvenirs and they did figure there would be some men in the audience, so they bought 1,200 hats and thought they would be enough. Then they made over the lounging room in the rear of the main floor into a hat depot and put across the front of it a long counter, behind to give out the hats to the bread line, his garden. which the management intended to have pass by and get their hats in freight were carried from the port of orderly, Henry W.
