GOOD THINGS COMING TO THEATRES OF ST. JOHN

But Few More Times

Engagement of Madame Ellis at Opera House continues to cause marked sensation.

Madame Ellis, the one big sensation of the city, will be at the Opera House only tonight and tomorrow, her engagement here positively ending on Thursday evening.

Have you seen her? She will puzzle you, make you think, and even if you are inclined to scoff at such things, just try to figure out how she does it and you will agree that her work is simply wonderful. It is a radical departure from the ordinary mind reading acts, in fact she commences where the others leave off, for she gives names—full names—addresses, she tells you your names without seeing the paper or having it read out to you, so there is no possible chance for confederates in the audience.

Her manager invites everybody to submit any test they wish, no matter how hard, or complicated, it is just possible that St. John may succeed in doing what no other city or town has been able to do and that is to make "The Woman Who Knows" say that she does not know.

Tomorrow afternoon Madame Ellis will give a special matinee for ladies only, positively no gentlemen admitted; all the men on the stage and in orchestra will be required to leave the house, so that ladies may ask her personal, private questions. The matinee commences at 2.30. Usual price of admission.

SAYS THE PRISONERS WERE BADLY TREATED

Johnson Sent to Prison for Life for Killing Guard in Manitoba Penitentiary

Winnipeg, July 9.—Accusation of "cruel and inhuman treatment of prisoners," of "assaults on convicts," and other irregularities were made against officials of the Manitoba penitentiary yesterday afternoon, when Albert Johnson, alias Fishburn, a convict, took the stand in his own behalf on the charge of murdering Guard Anton Fladeby. Charles Carson, another convict, gave testimony along similar lines and alleged that Deputy Warden John McLeod was accompanied on his rounds of cells by a vicious dog which had on occasions bitten the witness.

The line of defence was that Johnson killed Fladeby under grave provocation. Johnson was sentenced to life imprisonment for manslaughter.

THE LAST WORD

Their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council

(Montreal Gazette.) In a study little room devoid of all insignia of authority, sit half a dozen elderly gentlemen in tweed suits, entirely unimpressed by the external adjournment is concerned; and yet the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council says the last word which 1,000,000,000 people will cheerfully obey throughout the bounds of the greatest empire that has been.

This is the marvel—the note struck is one of extreme simplicity; but it is only greatness that can afford to be simple. It was said of Queen Victoria when her majesty visited the Third Napoleon, that in her simplicity she looked all the queen accustomed to place and power, and showed favorably by comparison with the Empress Eugenie, who, all respondent, never was able to wear the air of security, as one to the manner born.

The committee of the privy council interprets the law for the empire. From all parts of the world come the legal representatives of the people, and for the last word, the final expression of authority, which all will obey. And this is the thing to be intimate—intimate knowledge which their lordships have of the most intricate and puzzling questions which are concerned with local issues, which are often parcelled in their nature, and which are related to usage and procedure which one would never expect their lordships to be acquainted with.

But that is precisely the case—their lordships know all about the vexed question. They are familiar with the constitution of the outlying dominions. They understand local interest and objection. They are able to delicately hold the balance as between the federal and the provincial powers. They understand the nuances of difference and why they arose and how they operate. They are "en rapport" with the genius of dissonance. They are familiar with the sanctions, legal and social and economic, of burning India. They know the temperaments and the prejudices of the prepossessions and antipathies of the dominion. It is a matter of knowledge and administration, and the committee is able to enter fully and understandingly into the intricacies of the French civil code as affecting the lives and conduct of 2,000,000 people in the province of Quebec.

To the general apprehension this might seem impossible, but their lordships are the most eminent men in the empire. They have made a life study of the laws operating in all parts of the latter. What is more—they have been able to enter into the spirit of the causes and questions which come before them. Thus, it happens that the last word is accepted with loyal content by all litigants. Of course the decision cannot please all the litigious elements; but all will concede that substantial justice has been rendered.

The lawyers are in robes, with horse hair wigs; but their lordships wear no robes, and some of them are in tweed suits. They sit in chairs. They often move about and talk to the lawyers in an unconventional manner. The latter stand in awe of their lordships, who speak for the empire, and whose decisions cannot be gainsaid. At the same time, the sense of power is never absent. The very simplicity which marks the proceedings, the absence of all insignia, the consciousness that this little group of elderly men keep the even life of the empire in its unimpaired course, gives the sense of majesty, even though their lordships wear billy cock hats, tweed suits and four-in-hand ties.

When the lawyer is young and timid, their lordships are very considerate. They will often say an encouraging word, or come to him and converse, or seek for co-operation in the elucidation of a knotty point. Many a young man has been thus fortified by the kind words of their lordships. The tone is conversational. There is no hint, nothing to suggest authority; but the consciousness that the last word is to be spoken by the committee, and that no authority can impugn the decision that may be come to, gives a great impressiveness to the scene. The atmosphere is stuffy; the horse hair chairs are antiquated; the room is small; all is bare and unadorned; but in this little apartment is the might of the empire. There speaks the final authority. Here the decision is reached which affects the lives of 300,000,000 people.

This is the high testimony to the understanding of the committee, to its mastery grasp of the varied questions with which it is called upon to deal, that in every part of the empire the decisions of the committee are accepted with loyal and satisfied readiness. Quebec desired the final appeal to lie with our own courts, but the committee, with loyal and satisfied readiness, Quebec desired the final appeal to lie with our own courts, but the committee, with loyal and satisfied readiness, Quebec desired the final appeal to lie with our own
