LABOR AIMS FOR HIGHER TYPE OF CIVILIZATION

Tom Moore Warns Workers of Canada Violence Cannot Bring Reform—The Way of Progress.

Toronto, Sept. 4.—For the first time since 1913 a Labor Day parade was held in this city on Monday and it was regarded as the best ever seen here. Between 10,000 and 12,000 trades unionists took part in it, and there were many attractive floats in the procession.

One feature of the parade was the "union domestic," asking eight daily, and this was followed by a gloomy contrast of "non-union domestic" working fourteen hours. As in former years, the objective of the parades was the Canadian National Exhibition, where addresses were given by labor leaders. Tom Moore, president of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, was the chief speaker. He warned the workers of Canada that reforms cannot be brought about by violence, and that the only way in which anything can be accomplished in their interests is through legitimate effort and evolution.

Sees a New Objective.

At the same time, while coming out strongly in favor of moderation in their methods of progress, Mr. Moore made it quite plain that the present aims of labor are not to be their final objective, as he believed that before their present objectives have been reached they will have set new ones at which to aim. He did not view the aims of labor as any mere struggle for greater financial reward for their work, but declared it was simply a battle for a higher type of civilization.

Referring to the general unrest, President Moore said he did not think this would ever be wholly overcome, as content would mean stagnation, but the proper direction in which unrest should turn its activity was construction, and not destruction. He professed to believe that the conditions in Canada were not so bad as many people thought.

bor believed in the eight-hour system. He claimed that the Dominion government could establish the eight-hour system upon federal works, but when Fren-ier Borden was approached in the matter "he passed the buck on to the provincial premiers, and the buck was passed back again."

Jas. Simpson, a local labor man, urged a greater representation of labor in parliament.

Mrs. W. E. Slinger, a member of the independent labor party of this city, advised the women to further the cause of labor.

ARE YOU A LADY?

Are you a lady?

Of course this question is directed to the feminine sex. Probably no other word in the English language is so misused as the word "lady." One hears on every side the terms "saleslady" and even "washlady." How absurd! Not that one is less worthy for being a sales woman or a washer woman; that is not the point. Why not as well use "ice gentleman," "sales gentleman" and similar expressions?

In the fairy tale of Cinderella the wise godmother, who knew so cleverly what was the correct thing, defined a "lady" as a feminine person who remembered three things: Never to talk of ill health as a virtue, never to mention the cost of things, and never to be in a hurry.

"There," some man exclaims. "Women are always behind now. Why urge them never to hurry?" Because careful planning, and consideration of the convenience of others, will make it possible for women to keep their appointments without nerve exhaustion and upsetting of other people's plans.
