No change of government, no political manifestations of any kind, outside of actual revolution, could have one-quarter the effect on the daily life of the average Britisher as this strike is having.

REV. CHAS. P. FREEMAN, M. A., Pastor.

Alone.

No change of government, no political manifestations of any kind, outside of actual revolution, could have one-quarter the effect on the daily life of the average Britisher as this strike is having.

The political element in the life of any community is secondary to the economic element.

The mistake governments have made

The mistake governments have made in the past, and are still making for that matter, is in attempting to whip economic laws into conformity with the requirements of political expedition.

New York, Feb. 29.—Becau For Fall in Dandelions

Real government is nothing but the organization of a community to live according to economic laws and to so adjust the life of that community to economic laws that they will yield the maximum benefit to every member of the community.

Once governments learn the immutability of economic law and to legislate in strict accordance with it, half the troubles of the world will be ended.

New York, Feb. 29.—Because the village of Ossining allowed dandelions, tall grass and weeds to grow over the edges of the sidewalk in front of Miss Frances Gettel's residence in Ossining, a jury in the Supreme Court at White Plains gave her a judgment of $5,000 against the village for personal injuries received in a fall.

On July 21, 1921, the dandelions and weeds were unusually tall and "juicy," Miss Gettel told the jury and Supreme Court Justice Morschauser. She said it was the custom of city departments to cut the growth away from the sidewalk so people would not slip. On the July afternoon, however, she stepped from her house, slipped and fell, fracturing her left kneecap.
