

Poetry.

"LET ME GO, FOR THE DAY BREAKETH"
GEOFFREY KEENE, 25.
I am gone, the day is breaking,
I am gone, the day is breaking...

OBSERVING LENT.

It was a cold night in February, and Mrs. Allen had gathered her little family around a bright wood-fire in their pleasant sitting-room...

children this cold weather—how many poor missionaries might be comforted, were brothers and grown-up persons to give them their money, instead of spending it for what they can do without...

"Why mamma," said Ellen, "I never thought that so much could be done by merely denying ourselves what we can do without."
