Dr. R. Bell

Sir Wm. H. Broadbent, M. D., F. R. S., London, Eng., having visited the Toronto Free Hospital for Consumptives in the summer of 1906, afterwards wrote a descriptive article for the British Medical Journal in which he said:—"The hospital for advanced and far advanced consumption in Toronto is the first which, so far as I am aware, has been erected purely and simply with a view to prevention. I do not know who is to be credited with the idea, whether lay or medical, but I regard it as a fine instance of Canadian common sense and foresight."
