METHODIST TABLE TALK.

SPECIAL DISCOUNT.

(From the London Methodist.) "Let it serve for Table-talk : Then, howsoe'r thou speakest, among other things I shall digest it.'

"Mr. and Mrs. Perks have sailed for South Africa." It is a very brief, formal announcement, but one that will have an interest for all of your readers. One of the best-known and best-beloved of all the favourites of the Methodist people, our united prayers go with him that in these rough winds the Almighty Father may protect him, and that the change may benefit and invigorate Mr. Perks for service long to come. It would be, perhaps, impossible to name another man in the Connexion who is at once so profound a scholar, so godly a man, and so popular and beloved in every circle. We cannot but look for much good as the result of his visit to the Cape and its colonies.

By the bye, while we are at the Mission House, there is another whose name is buzzed in Table-talk—one who will always figure prominently in the history of Wesleyan Missions and in he records of the Mission House. Time may come, and time may go; but e goes on for ever. As young, as active, as hard at work as ever, there is Mr. Boyce. And vet he is one of the oldest ministers in the Connexion. He entered the ministery in 1829. He was one of the earlier missionaries in South Africa, when the colonies were most lawless and unsettled, when the Border tribes were at once most suspicious and most defiant, and when the perils of the Bush began much lower down, and gathered much more thickly than today. Then in '45, when Australia was a misty possession of the British Empire, somewhere on the other side of the world, and was associated only with the gangs of convicts at Botany Bay, Mr. Boyce was there, shrewdly spying out the foundations of that vigorous and extensive Society which we now possess. Now, after nearly fifty years of service, it is rumoured that he is going to retire, and "settle in Australia." May be long enjoy his wellearned repose - if repose could be possible or enjoyable to Mr. Boyce. If this be so, the Mission Honse will have a vacancy. The recent legislation of the Conference has driven Table-talk to find three names for every vacant place. The vague tongue of rumor states that the choice will lie between three Indian veterans - Mr. Jenkins, Mr. Walton, and Mr. Kilner. And from three such men who can choose?

Preparations are being made in good earnest for the "gathering of Methodist Workers;" for such is the name which the originators have chosen. Of course there are men who object to anything that is new. Supernumerary: That is not a Methodist phrase, sir. Methodism has local preachers, leaders, stewards, Sunday-school teachers, tractdistributors, and sick-visitors. But the workers" belongs to the slang phraseology that has come in with the flippancies of the age. Our Young Man laughed good-humouredly in reply: no Well, you might certainly quote Scrip- di ture precedent for such an advertise- ar ment. It would run somewhat thus: ch To you it is notified, O people called go Methodists, that with the consent and bi
