"Here's a Chance for Dick"

Make a habit of looking over the classified pages of The Times "between whites." You will find business chances for husband, son or brother that they might never hear of otherwise.

Opportunity to better his position or to enter a business for which he is better qualified. Chances to sell his boat—fishing tackle—camping outfit—or a chance to buy at a real bargain. Cut out these little ads, save them for the men folk when they come home in the evening. They will appreciate your thoughtfulness—and you will find many ways whereby they can save or make dollars.

It's one of the most interesting parts of the paper, too.

There's sure to be something new in every issue. Look to-day.

The Honest Gambler.

"I am an honest gambler," he said; "I'm on the square, My word is good for any sum, the game I play is fair; I wrong no man who plays with me, he has an even show. Ask anyone who knows me well, and he will tell you so. And so I asked a pale-faced youth, ill clad and sunken eyed, and trembling before me, 'Time was when I had prospects bright, but now my future's dim, I robbed the bank I worked for that I might play with him.'"

And next I sought a little home where sat a faithful wife, Her cheeks were pinched and stained, with tears, for sorrow ruled her life. The light of beauty long had left the eyes that once had shone, And on her cheeks where roses bloomed an ashen grey was thrown, I asked her what she knew about this honest gambler, and the tears began to flow again, she brushed them with her hand, "I once was happy, love was mine, our home was neat and trim, Until my husband robbed my life that he might play with him."

I chanced to meet a little lad whose shoes were torn and thin, With gaping holes in toes and soles which let the water in, And he was crying for a crust of bread that he might eat, And pitilessly trudging through the winter's slush and sleet, I asked him why, at such an age, such misery should be, And he replied, "There was a time my Paw was good to me; But then the honest gambler—here his eyes began to swim—" "Got hold of Paw, and now his wages 'always go to him.'"

Perhaps it hinges on the word and what the gambler reckons it alone in paying to a cent. The gambler calls it cutting cards and dealing on the square, And sealing isn't theft to him, he robbed not being there. But what about this pale-faced youth and what about his wife, And what about this little lad deprived of joys of life? Look at the misery that reigns where joy was wont to lurk, Come, "honest gambler," do you think that this is honest work?"

Common Error Regarding Patents.

There is a very general notion that when the United States Government gives a man a patent for an invention by this very act the patentee is in possession of an exclusive and inalienable right for a term of years. Now this is the very thing that does not necessarily exist, and the very thing that patentees, inventors and the public would like to have established. Most patents are exploited by others than inventors, and the money for their purpose largely supplied by those with little knowledge of the laws. It has happened time and time again that the
