The War Situation.

It has become a commonplace that there is no room for strategy in the fighting of this war, where huge armies lie interlocked over hundreds of miles and flanking movements are impossible or rapidly obliterated. Like many other commonplaces, it is apt to be suddenly upset. It is still true of the West front, and probably will be until peace comes; but in the huge arena of the East things are rapidly shaping themselves into a disposition of force which would delight the heart of Napoleon. If large and brilliant strategic manoeuvres are impracticable for the same reason on all the fronts there, it is not true of the fronts themselves; and both the Allied and Teutonic general command are faced with the problem of making large decisions which may prove vital.

That this is so is shown by the variety of opinion among the foremost military experts upon the merits of the Balkan situation. Some of them regard the German-Bulgarian invasion of Dobruja as of little moment; the Times military expert calls it a serious danger to Roumania, whom he even compares to Serbia of last autumn. Some, too, criticize Roumania for going so eagerly after Transylvania, while others counter that Austria, even more than Bulgaria, is the weak link that should be snapped. Undoubtedly it is most important to the Allies that their greatest weight should be thrown where it is most needed, and it is by no means easy to find where that is.

The war is shifting more and more to the East, where it is the opinion of many besides Hindenburg that it properly belongs. Next year, probably, it will be fought out there almost entirely. Fortunately, this cannot be until Germany has withdrawn in the West, not merely to an intermediate line, of whatever strength, but all the way to the Rhine. It is most unlikely that Joffre will attempt to go further: long before that happens more accessible avenues will have been opened elsewhere. And the mere moral effect of the retreat should do much to counteract the defensive strength that Germany would gain thereby.

Germany is playing a bold game in throwing large reinforcements into Bulgaria and driving at Dobruja. It may or may not have been anticipated by our side, but there can be no doubt of its success so far. It is being countered in the most effective way in Macedonia. Roumania is in no serious danger as long as Bulgaria is, and Bulgaria is in very serious danger indeed. The victories of the Serbians (there are French and Russians there also) at Florina and Lake Ostrovo have paved the way for the recapture of Monastir. No one will grudge them the satisfaction they must feel. It is likely to be increased very soon, for the great drive up the Vardar valley is under way, which alone will restore Serbia to her gallant people. It seems, too, as if the intervention of Greece can now be counted on definitely; if not, the new Cabinet is not likely to prove longer lived than its predecessors. Underneath the noisy surface and the clash of arms there must be proceeding a battle royal of the diplomats. For the present all eyes are turned to Dobruja and the Bulgarian campaign. If their invasion is repelled or halted all uneasiness on our side will disappear. That it should be possible at all is proof of the immense strength of the inside position of the Central Powers and the value of the Berlin-Constantinople artery, which must be cut at all costs.

Regret will be general in Newfoundland at the news of the death of Sir Cavendish Boyle. He will be remembered as one of the most popular and able Governors that have administered the affairs of the Colony. He came to Newfoundland from British Guiana in 1901 and left it to become Governor of Mauritius in 1904, retiring in 1911. His name will be long remembered here, for it is that of the author of the graceful verses that has been accepted as our National Ode.

We learn from private sources that Major Franklin has been awarded the high distinction of the D.S.O. His many friends will hear with pleasure of this recognition of his brilliant services in the field, an honor which he shares with Newfoundland.

The Royal Picture Theatre, Star Hall, will open on Thursday after the arrival of the Florizel with the latest and best pictures from America. WM. J. RYALL, Manager.—sep18,11

McMurdo's Store News

MONDAY, Sept. 18th, 1916.

We are now again in a position to supply the Military Mirrors and Writing Cases that have become so popular among our boys at the front. The Mirrors are made of toughened steel and are highly polished on both sides forming a perfect and unbreakable mirror. In fact, when worn in the breast pocket, these mirrors have stopped a bullet in more than a few instances. The writing cases contain paper, envelopes and post cards in addition to a pencil, and are very handy and compact. The writing cases, and the envelope which contains the mirror are appropriately of khaki cloth. You should present one or both of these to your volunteer friend. Price 90c. each.

LOCAL FISHERY 11 DAYS HUNG UP.—For the past 11 days there has been no fresh codfish offered for sale in the local market, owing to adverse weather conditions prevailing within that period and preventing fishermen from operating on the grounds. This morning conditions were civil, fish were found in abundance and boats with an ample supply of bait got full loads. A couple of boats returned to port at noon and disposed of their catch promptly at remunerative prices.

Household Notes.

A fruit stain on tablecloth or napkin, if wet with camphor before water touches it, will entirely disappear.

Have a reserve stock of dishes generally used by the family, and much trouble will be saved when extra guests arrive.

Cut the bloom and stalk of the sweet Williams to the ground, and they will put up new shoots and continue blooming.

When serving sliced pineapples it is much better to slice and sugar it the evening before. This makes it very juicy and sweet.

Stockings should not be ironed, if you have no mangle to put them through, fold them smoothly with the hands and roll them up.

The most hygienic curtain arrangement for a sleeping room is a short curtain on the lower half of the window and a shade above.

A tennis racket should have its strings rubbed with vaseline, if it is put away for some time. This will prevent the strings from breaking.

There is nothing better for removing tar from white clothing than lard. Rub it well into the spot and wash it out with soap and warm water.
