THRILLING SCENES AT BOXING CONTESTS.

(By EUGENE CORRI.)
The riotous scenes witnessed at the ringside on the occasion of the Mike McGuire-Young Stribling contest at Columbus, Georgia, must have made the Irish boxer wonder whether he ought not to be dubbed the stormy petrel of the ring. Whenever he takes part in a contest there is some disagreement as to the justice of the decision, whether it is given in the Irishman's favor or against it.

Sentenced to Death.
In Columbus, McGuire was threatened with violence at the pistol's point, and with the alternative of hanging at the end of a rope if he refused to go into the ring. And when he did go through with his contest, the referee was compelled to agree to Stribling being proclaimed the winner. However, after he had been safely escorted to his hotel by the police, he altered his decision and stated that his official decision was a draw.

In Ireland McGuire had the unhappy experience of being threatened with shooting if he fulfilled his contract by going into the ring to fight Battline Siki. The promoter of the contest was actually sentenced to death by the Irregulars in the event of his failing to comply with their demands in calling off the fight.

The Free State Government, however, ordered the promoter to "carry on," and the contest was staged under armed protection. McGuire and Siki fought with troops guarding the ring, whilst the theatre was surrounded by Free State troops and detectives.

The crowd was the most orderly gathering one could wish to see anywhere, but when the time came for the fighters and spectators to leave the theatre, they were fired on by Irregulars, who used bombs and machine guns.

An Alarming Experience.
Most people imagine that dramatic scenes did not "with the demise" of the old prize ring, but such is not the case. I have been present at very unpleasant "flare-ups" following unpopular decisions. Happily, though, these occurrences are far and few between, otherwise boxing would not be the popular attraction it is to-day.

There have been several instances of intimidation of the referee in Glasgow, where for some time boxing as a public spectacle was, as a consequence, in very bad odour. I was once threatened, in Scotland, with all sorts of violence by a gang of roughs, who thought they could intimidate me into awarding my decision to the man they wanted to win. But I was glad to say that I got out of the unpleasant affair without a scratch.

It was just before this that a London sporting paper had sent their referee, "Brammy" Meadows, to handle a big fight in Glasgow. The same gang threatened to shoot him if he did other than what they wanted, and he was badly handled afterwards. The shock must have been a terrible one to him, for he died within a fortnight of the occurrence.

Instances of intimidation and ruffianism at the ringside in London have all occurred where there was a preponderance of aliens among the spectators. I had an alarming experience one night when I was refereeing a contest at the Ring, Blackfraters, where, by the way, the crowd is always a well-behaved one. Sometimes they shout their disapproval, at the referee's ruling, but they never let their displeasure go beyond verbal or vocal expression.

Threatened by a Lunatic.
However, when I was refereeing the contest between Pat O'Keefe and Bombardier Wells, at the Ring, O'Keefe attempted a few tricks. I cautioned him more than once.

Suddenly there was a warning shout. An American spectator had jumped into the ring, and was raising a revolver to fire at me when he was seized and held by the seconds and a number of the spectators. Had they not done so I am afraid it would have gone badly with me. The American was afterwards found to be a madman.

I have been present at a number of riotous scenes where rival gangs have used the opportunity provided by a boxing show to get at each other's throats, but these fights belong to the now dim and distant past. It is safe to say that nowadays, such happenings would be practically impossible at any of our big London shows, where the organization leaves nothing to be desired.

At another fight the crowd that collected was of such dimensions that a building twice the size of the one decided on could not have accommodated them all. This was the return meeting between Bombardier Wells and Gunner Moir, staged at the Canterbury Music Hall, in 1913.

Dispersed by Firmness.
The crowd that clamoured to get into the building was so great that the police were powerless to disperse the throng. Ticket holders who were late in arriving could not get within yards of the outer doors, and many had to go away without gaining admittance.

Traffic was held up, and it was not before the Fire Brigade was called out and the hoses played upon the crowd indiscriminately, that disappointed would-be spectators went home to change their minds and their clothes.—Tit Bits.

Fighting Fogs With Bombs!

NOVEL NOTIONS FOR CLEARING THE AIR.

Can London's fogs—the worst in the world—be prevented? As a result of a series of debates by the London County Council this ever-recurring problem is receiving an unusual amount of attention. Experts are trying to find a means of indefinitely mitigating the evil, while the suggestion has been made that research into the cause and cure of the fog menace be stimulated by the offer of substantial money prizes.

The war against fog has been carried on intermittently for the past three hundred years, during which time many curious proposals have been brought forward. Of these the fog cannon, invented by an Italian, named Maggiora, was one of the most odd. It consisted of a projector sixty feet in length from which were discharged huge charges of acetylene, and other gas.

By this means the inventor claimed to disperse the densest fog in less than half an hour, at a cost, over and above the initial outlay of a few hundred pounds for the necessary plant, of sevenpence per explosion. Experiments carried out in Italy seemed to justify the claim, but nothing has been heard of the idea for some time.

Some years ago the British Association, meeting at Stockport, witnessed an experiment with a type of cannon which fired giant smoke-rings into the air. The smoke-rings were of great density, and were intended to create an atmospheric disturbance, which would result in the dispersal of the fog. The demonstration, however, did not impress the scientists, whose collective opinion seems to have been that the smoke-rings tended to increase the fog nuisance instead of abating it.

Another strange device was that proposed by a member of the French Chamber of Commerce, who urged that London should be surrounded by a series of large electric fans, which, it was claimed, would set in motion an air current sufficient to clear the thickest fog. A few experts thought that the idea had possibilities, but eventually it was abandoned on account of the heavy expenditure that would be involved.

A Domestic Science teacher improves an old Virginia recipe with Libby's Milk

Domestic Science teachers are invariably fine cooks. And of course, they know food values. Miss Harriet Palmer, teacher of Domestic Science at Lynchburg College, Lynchburg, Va., is keenly on the alert for new and better methods to replace the old. For instance, Miss Palmer has found what Libby's Milk means in cooking—how it enriches food, giving it not only greater value but improving flavor. To demonstrate its quality of richness, she had her classes use it instead of fresh milk, in an old Virginia recipe for spoon bread. And they were all delighted with the new quality of creaminess and richness!

Libby's Milk enriches all cooking
What Libby's Milk adds to this old Virginia recipe for spoon bread, it gives to all cooking. For it is very rich in butter fat—that quality which gives to cream and butter their great food value. In one 16 oz. can of Libby's Milk there are 7 1/2 teaspoons of pure butter fat! This high percentage is due to several things. First, Libby's Milk comes from specially selected herds which pasture in the finest dairy sections of the country. For just this purpose Nature must have meant these places, with their shaded hills and grassy meadows. Here men specialize in dairying; in selecting herds that give the richest milk. In the very midst of these localities are our condenseries where we remove more than half the moisture from this milk, making it double rich. Nothing is added to it; none of its food values are taken away. But to bring it to you and others who live in far sections of the country, we seal it in air-tight cans and sterilize it. Get this double richness in the foods you serve. Try Libby's Milk in one of your special dishes. See how much its double richness adds in flavor; how it improves any recipe in which you use milk. You will find its use economical, too; and such a great convenience to have a supply always on hand! Try a can; you will find new pleasure in cooking and your family new appreciation of your dishes. Write for free recipe folder. We will gladly send you a copy of a new folder containing some of the best recipes sent us by good cooks who use Libby's Milk.
