REV. ROBERT BURNS, D. D.,

"Explanations of Difficult Pas-sages of Scripture."

Apart from longthened Commentaries on Scrip-sers and doctrinal and practical expositions of Divino Truth, all of which have their appropriate uses, it has often occurred that a short and yet comprehensive work like that of Dr. Cooke, of fondon, England, was desideratum in our popu-far religious literature. I have examined it with some care, and it has made on my mind a very fa-vorable impression. Of course there will be varie-ties of opinion on all subjects, and different ex-planations of difficult passages in the God may be given; but always in the horder richly deserves the control of all that are fraudly to owney admirable suggestions on the stee of opinion services of the control of the cont

SUDDEN DEATH .- A Mrs. Elliott of Dumfries died very suddenly on Saturday morning last. She had been in good health, and went to bed as well as usual the previous night. Her husband found her breathing regularly about four o'clock in the morning when he got up, but on going back to the bed shortly afterwards he heard a peculiar noise, and she died almost instantly.

A CONFIDENCE MAN NABRED.—A confidence operator, named Kibbie, who has for some time past been carrying on glove manufactory in Hamilton, has come to grief. He has been going it pretty fast, and by representing himself to be a man of means, and strengthening the assertion by outward appearances he has walked into a large number of merchants. The Sheriff wound up his business for him lately, in virtue of an execution pro claims came against him thick and fast Most of these could be construed into no-thing more than "breaches of trust," but amounted to fraud. On Wednesday he was taken from Hamilton to Berlin to await trial at the Assizes.

RAIL RIDING, &c .- The village of Han over, like almost all other villages, has a citizen who dearly loveth his lush, and his name is McGregor. When under the influence of liquor, which occurs regulardoes unpleasant things, and for this cause three men came upon him one evening lately when he was going home drunk, tarred and feathered him, and rode him on a rail. He laid a complaint with the up to answer the charge. McGregor had had a companion with him who was called on for evidence, but he said he was so very drunk on the occasion he did not remember anything about it, and McGregor ndition for imagining he was riding on a rail when in reality he was not. The defendants were fined ten cents each and costs, and the plaintiff for some threatening language he had used was ordered to find bail to keep the peace for the next six months

THE BRUCE STABBONG CASE .- Sand ped a companion in Walkerton time ago, and had fled as far as Guelph before he was arrested, has been sentenced at the last sitting of the Bruce Co. Court to four years' imprisonment in the Penithe criminal is now merely an overgrown boy, and he will come out again into the world after his term of expiation has expired still a young man, with an experience which, though very sad, may prove very useful to him afterwards. His case is a fresh exhortation to heed the warn ing, "Beware of the green-eyed monster For allowing passion a momentary preponderance he has been condeinned four years' reflection on the crime ; four years' hard labour have been imposed upon him to give balm to the wounds of th man he stabbed, and to erase the vile T. HOUSE OF COMMONS. OTTAWA, March 18. took the Chair at o'clock.

Mr. Connell inquired of the Government whether the Stamp Act was construed to impose a duty on notes, &c., under the sum of $95.

Hon. Mr. Bose said it was the province of the Government to construe the Act, and it would be improper for them to answer the question.

The question being put on receiving a number of petitions praying the selection of Robinson's route for the intercolonial Railway.

of Robinson's route for the intercolonial Railway,
Dr. Parker said the petitioners appeared to labour under the misapprehension that this question was still at the disposal of the House, whereas the House had vested the Government with the right to decide the route.
Hon. Mr. Cartier said the duties and responsibilities of the Government as to the selection of a route could not interfere with the right of any portion of the community, or of any individual in the Dominion, to address the House by petition.

tion. Hoton said the Minister of Militia had no doubt laid down the law correctly as to the right of petition, but what signified that right if no action was to be taken on the petitions when received? He differed a little however, from his friend the member for Centre Wellington, as to the position of this question. Though the House had vested the Government with the right to select the route, it was still competent for the House had vested the law or to advise and in ernment with the right to select the route, it was still competent for the House to repeal the law, or to advise and instruct the Executive as to what they should do, and to vote want of confidence in them if they made an improper selection or failed to make a selection at all.

Hon John Sandfield McDonald said the public outside had a very cernest anyiety to the last. It is rare that three generations of men exhibit such characteristics.

Thrown into office, its commanding situation would make the Astor House a source of revenue such as it can never become as a hotel. But the wishes of its founder, though dead, still prevail, and a hotel it will be, probably, during the lifetime of its present owner.

HORRIBLE CASE OF CHILD MURDER.—The Quebec Gazette has the following:
On Friday night, an ex-bailiff of the Becorder's Court, named W. H. Taylor, was a arrested on suspicion of having murdered his son, W. H. C. Taylor, a child of eight years of age. Coroner Panet was notified to the local time of the box and immediately on top of a manner heap near the house.

Arthur Election.

The election of Reeve for the township of Arthur took piece on the 19th instant. The roads were almost impassable, and one-half the votes in the township were not polled. The following is the state of the poll, as officially announced at the close:—

Majority for Stevenson, 65
We have learned further that Mr Stevenson's majority would have been very heavy had it not been for the condition of the back reads, and the heavy rate one. Thursday, Most of his supporters had a considerable discance to travel to a rolling place; teams could not get through, and the electers who walked were completely drenched. Mr Clarke's strength, on the other hand, lay in and around the Village of Arthur, where the roads were comparatively good, and teams at command, which accounts for his running sowell in the South Division.
