JURY DECLARES BECKER GUILTY

Will Be Sentenced to the Electric Chair for Killing Rosenthal.

TAKES VERDICT CALMLY

Counsel for Prisoner Says Charge to Jury Was Unfair to Accused.

New York, Oct. 24, - "Guilty of murder in the first degree," was the verdict returned three minutes before midnight tonight by the jury in the case of Lieutenant Becker, charged with killing Herman Rosenthal.

The jury had been out exactly hours and 57 minutes. The length of its deliberation, and the frequency of its requests for exhibits, together with an unmistakable sign of hot arguments in the jury room, had led most of those who waited late at the criminal courts building to believe that there would be no agree-ment. So that when the blow finally fell upon the defendant its force was all the more crushing. Becker's lawyers had grown more confident as the hours sped. Becker himself, chatting pleasantly with his wife, the Plitt brothers, and a former reporter Frederick H. Hawley, who had testified in his behalf, was serenely confident that there could be no answer from the jury room save not guilty. Takes Shock Well.

The convicted man bore up under the shock with the grimness and resolution that had characterized him all through the trial. When the momentous answer came to the question of the clerk of the court, "Gentlemen, have you agreed upon a verdict?" the lieutenant turned calmly toward Harold B. Skinner, the foreman, and displayed no emotion whatever as Mr. Skinner pronounced a few short words that spelled his fate. The only sign of agitation, the only visible appear ance of shock, was a grayness that spread over his dark face, the nartraction of the muscles of the throat. Presently, when he lifted his right hand, and gave oath as to the facts of his age and circumstances, there was not a quiver of the big arm or a waver of a finger. He could answer the formal questions put to him only in husky tones, barely audible a few feet from where he stood at the bar of the Wife Faints.

While the jury was making up its mind absolute stillness, heightened by the midnight quiet of the streets, prevailed in the courtroom.

After the verdict was given no one was allowed to leave the room until the jury had filed out. Justice Goff had given orders that anyone disturbing the proceedings in the slightest degree should be brought before him for punishment.

Two hundred persons or more gathered at the courtroom door. her ear almost at the keyhole, sat the prisoner's wife. As the last juror left the room by another exit, the door flew open and a man rushed excitedly into the corridor. The crowd gave way. He was half-way down the steps to the telephone booth when a policeman shouted:

"What's the verdict?" The fleeing man tooked over his shoulder.

'Guilty!" he shouted. For a moment there was silence, keen, intense, gripping. It was broken by a woman's muffled scream, and the sound of a falling body.

The prisoner's wife had fainted dead away. Just before the verdict was given Mr. McIntyre made his last plea. He asked that the court grant an earlier request of the jury to inspect the testimony of the persons who talked to Sam Schepps in Hot Springs, Ark., The court refused to hear the plea.
