

SUPPLEMENT TO THE CANADIAN CHURCH MAGAZINE.

L LANCHAN, NELLEJE

Bird Neighbors : With an introduction by John Burroughs. Crown 4to Cloth, with fifty-two beautiful colored photographs, $2.25.

Bird Neighbors will be found not only to contain much interesting reading, but to have a high value as a book of reference. It is illustrated with fifty-two colored photographic plates, which place the birds represented in a life-like manner before us. In this charming volume no fewer than 150 of our "bird neighbors" are accurately described. Mr. Burroughs says that the pictures, "with the various grouping of the birds according to color, season, habitat, etc., ought to render the identification of the birds, with no other weapon but an opera glass, an easy matter."

This ably written book will, therefore, add a new pleasure to the country residence, and a new interest to sylvan rambles. As a popularly written guide to the Bird Kingdom it will take a very high place. It is scientific enough, without being overwhelmingly technical. It is a companion for the field, the orchard and the wood; while as an assistant in awakening the perceptions of young people to the sights and sounds of Nature, it will win the regard of all who are interested in the rising generation.

This book makes the identification of our birds simple and positive, even to the uninitiated, through certain unique features.

I.—All the birds are grouped according to color, in the belief that a bird's coloring is the first and often the only characteristic noticed.

II.—The descriptions are untechnical, clear and vivid; and the fact that Mr. John Burroughs has read and annotated the book vouches for their accuracy.

III.—A supplementary chapter tells which groups of birds show preference for certain localities, and where to look for others.

IV.—A second supplementary chapter deals with the family traits and characteristics.

V.—By still another classification, the birds are grouped according to their season.

VI.—All the popular names by which a bird is known are given both in the descriptions and the index.

The fifty-two colored plates, are the most beautiful and accurate ever given in a moderate priced and popular book.

CAINE, HALL

The Christian. A Story : Crown 8vo., Cloth $1.50; Paper, 75 cents.

This is a drama of frail human nature aspiring to perfection, and struggling to attain the highest ideal. The story opens in the Isle of Man, but the action takes place for the most part in London, and the author's strenuous preparation for this book is suggested by the succession of moving and dramatic scenes from a strange and unknown life in the world's metropolis. His mastery of the human drama has never been shown so forcibly. The romance throbs with life, and the emotional force of these pictures of aspiration, temptation, love, and tragedy, reaches a height which will make a lasting impression upon the literature of our time.

"His greatest work: 'The Christian,' is really a great novel. It is evidently the result of some of the problems of modern society, which is the business of the Church to solve, which it has been long attempting to solve; but the solution of which, unfortunately, seems to be as far off as ever."—Toronto Mail and Empire.

"In 'The Christian,' Mr. Hall Caine depicts the types of mind and character, of creed and culture, of social effort and religious purpose, which he sees in the life of England and America at the close of the nineteenth century. The work will, therefore, be of interest to a much wider circle than mere readers of fiction."—Toronto Globe.

"It will especially attract the curiosity of the sociologist, and thousands will read it for the literary and artistic flavor which is usually possessed by Mr. Hall Caine's works."—Toronto Herald.

"This book is in its way a modern 'Pilgrim's Progress,' a record of the endeavor of an earnest human soul to escape from the City of Destruction to the New Jerusalem."—Melodist Magazine and Review.
