GIRLS OFFERED FOR MARRIAGE IN THE HOSPITAL IN PALERMO—CURIOUS EVENTS AT SUNDAY COURTHIPS.

The following is a description from a foreign exchange of a scene which goes on every Sunday morning in the hospital at Palermo:

The long dormitories were clean and orderly, but the curious and peculiar feature of this establishment was the parlour or reception room. Picture a large, long room, the greater portion of which is divided off from the sides and further end by an iron grating, which forms a cage, entered only by a well barred street door, through which visitors from the outer world are admitted.

Here they sit on the benches to converse with those on the other side of the iron grating. Once a week, however, Sunday mornings from ten to twelve, this place is the scene of the most novel and ludicrous courtships ever described.

One of the objects of this motherly establishment is to find fit and proper husbands for the girls under its charge. The fit and proper here is much like the fit and proper of society—the one requisite being that the young man is bound to show himself in possession of sufficient means to maintain a wife in comfort before he is allowed to aspire to the hand of one of those precious damsels.

Having given in his credentials of fitness to the guardian, he receives a card which admits him next Sunday morning to an inspection of the candidate for matrimony.

There, sitting on a bench, if his curiosity and ardour will allow him to remain sitting, he awaits the arrival on the other side of the grating of the Lady Superior accompanied by the girl. She had been selected by order of seniority and capacity for household work from the hundred or more between seventeen and twenty-one waiting for a youth to deliver them from their prison.

The two young people, both no doubt breathless with agitation at the importance of the ceremony, have to take one long, fixed look at each other.

No word is spoken, no sign is made. These good Sisters believe to fully in the language of the eye that, in their minds, any addition is futile, and might but serve to mystify the pure and perfect effect of love at first sight.

The look over, the Lady Superior asks the man if he will accept the maiden as his bride. Should the answer be in the affirmative the same question is put to her, and if she bows assent the betrothal has taken place, and they part till the Sunday following.

The young lover again makes his appearance before the tribunal of guardians, and there the contract is signed, the day of marriage fixed, and he is granted leave to bring the ring, earrings and wedding dress, and present them—through the gridiron of course—to his betrothed.

Everything has to pass the scrutiny of the Sisters, for fear of a letter or some tender word being slipped in with the gifts.

During the few Sundays that intervene between the first love scene and the marriage an hour's conversation within the hearing of the Lady Superior is allowed, but not a touch is exchanged. The empty talk, interspersed with giggling, consists of enquiries as to the wedding dress and the occupation and place of abode of the suitor.

Should the young man refuse the first damsel presented to him he is favored with the sight of three more; but should he still appear difficult he is dismissed. The girl also has the power of refusal.

The marriage over, the task of the Sisters is done. Here falls a veil they never lift—and whether happiness and faithfulness are the result of this rite they never inquire.

Our readers must before now have wondered what inducement there can be to make the youths who have the world to choose from come here in search of a wife.

The hundred and fifty francs are the attraction. That sum is given in dowry with each of these girls, and for that sum, it seems, a Stollan is willing to sell himself for life.

ASYLUM REVELATIONS IN NEW YORK.

ALBANY, April 30.—The assembly committee which investigated the affairs of the Utica insane asylum presented a report this morning. The committee concluded that Edwin D. Hughes received his injuries at the hands of attendants, Brown Weir and Bills, and that one of these is personally responsible for his death. The committee find that the attendants treated the patients with great roughness and at times with cruelty and brutality, and that the patient Heald died within a few days after his ribs had been broken by the attendant Becco. There is an understanding among the attendants that there would be no complaints against each other for infraction of the rules. The committee recommend the establishment of a school for attendants and higher rates of pay. They say the evidence is convincing that Miss Lathrop was suffering under a delusion when she made the charge that outrages had been committed in the asylum. They also recommend the appointment of one woman physician. The assembly committee think the management of the institution is loose and that a radical change is necessary and that Dr. Gray spent a considerable time away from the institution.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure for consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows.

Animated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. THE LATEST DYNAMITE HOAX.

It was known that a certain smart U. S. young man had studied chemistry for six months; had ordered a sectioned hand-bag and sailed for England. It was subsequently ascertained that he had made several visits to a clock and watch maker before leaving. The cable was used to cause his arrest on arrival, and a trio of metaphysicians were summoned to open the bag, which, in view of probabilities, were regarded as patriotic heroism of the highest order. The official verified reported 23 samples of Johnston's Fluid Explosive, 10,000 circulars, 4 shirt collars, and a box of tooth-picks.—Hull Budget.
