his inaugural address. He reviewed the past career of Canada, and pressed his conviction that though Canada ad as yet produced no great genius, no intel-ett of such an order as would command a worldle reputation, still that in all the qualities and advantages necessary to make a great and happy nation, Canada lies not in arrear of many lder country. Canada also, said the learned hief Justice, possesses some advantages seldom loyed by older countries, in the respect that e we can view the operations of nature in er aboriginal state. The vast and imperfectly applored territory to the North and North-west us, displays phenomena only to be seen in ocalities which the hand of civilization has act touched. The mighty forests, the rich mines and the beautiful scenery of the Northwest region all afford interesting fields for discovery and description. After a disclaimer as to his own fitness for the office the Institute had elected him to, the learned Prosident concluded most eloquent and impressive address, of which the above is not even a faint outline, amidst loud applause.—Abridged from the Bri-

British Periodical Publications. Delivered in all the principal Cities and Towns free of Postage. The London Quarterly Review, (Conservative)

The North British Review, (Free Church.) Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine, (Tory.)

The Edinburgh Review, (Whig.)

Although these works are distinguished by the political shades above indicated, yet but a small portion of their contents is devoted to political subjects. It is their literary sharacter which gives them their chief value, and in that they stand confessedly far above all other journals of their class. Backwood, still under the fatherly care of Christo. North, maintains its ancient cell brity, and is at this time unusually attractive, from the serial works of Bulwer and other literary notables, written for that Magazine, and first appearing in its columns both in Great Britain and the United States. Such works as "The Caxtons," and "My New Novel," (both by Bulwer,) "The Gree Hand," "Katie Stewart," and other serials, of which numerous rival editions are issued by the leading publishers in this country, have to be reprinted by those publishers from the pages of Blackwood, after it has been issued by Messrs Scott & Co., so that Subscribers to the Reprint of that Magizine may always rely on having the earliest reading of these fascinating tales.
