

case my hubby so readily reformed.
I tried to get a position in the Civil Service & was told in response to my application that I was too elder for the Civil Service and that my services were not required.
I applied in vain, and waited for 6 weary months, when one REAL man took pity on me, and my frequent failures, and secured me a position in the C.S.
I was allowed to start as a junior clerk, and because I had been grand enough to let my husband go, to help fund a fight, so that some people might suffer, I got a salary of $10 less than any of my fellow employees.
The English Government thought it worth while to pay my services and me of education $110 per month, as secretary-translator at the Intelligence Bureau, was Office, London, and now in spite of my 4 years was second
