

This is one of the stories the old stone gate might tell us if it could. And perhaps as it stands there and looks over the noisy city that has grown around its feet, it wishes it might tell the boys and girls some of the brave deeds it saw so many years ago.