than amongst the People: By a notable Exercion of their Power, they had, more cunningly, than fairly, dissolved that P-t, which had worh fo many various Complections, and which had concurr'd in fuch various Measures and Operations: A new one had been happily chosen; in which a great many of Those who had seen the whole Course of these Transactions, and who had been known Advocates for the War, were not admitted to fit: New Men were under no Obligation to countenance a Measure they had not been concern'd in; nor were even suppos'd to know what had been faid, or done, exceptionably, inconfistently, or factiously before their Time. Such a P-t might, therefore, take any new Direction, without being expos'd to any Cenfure without Doors, or creating any violent Ferment within: And as to the Conqueror of Cape Breton, he was become a Peace-Officer; his Friend was not only to be his Successor, but to have the principal Share of the Merit and Glory of the Negotiation; and to initiate him yet farther into the Mystery of Treatymaking, the Convention of this Year was entrusted to his Management, in the same manner as the last.

I have already infinuated, That, tho' the Offers of France and Spain had been rejected, Peace had been refolved upon: And I have shewn, that the proper Measures had been taken to render all Opposition ineffectual: But, notwithstanding this was the secret Purpose, all Appearances were against it. By this new Convention, our Armies were to consist of such incredible Numbers, that I scarce can venture to specify them, for fear of being suspected of wilful Misrepresentation: But whether I am believ'd or not, it is fit to be known. That according to the Treaty, the Allied Army in Flanders, for the Year 1748, was to consist
