Woman's Power Over Man

Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organism soon loses the power to sway the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman. Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has prescribed for and cured many thousands of women. He has devised a successful remedy for woman's ailments. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive specific for the weaknesses and disorders peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine dealers sell it. No honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute in order to make a little larger profit.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG, SICK WOMEN WELL.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and strengthen Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

The Gem Theatre aims to have the best that can be secured in pictures and this week's bill is up to the usual excellent standard. Last evening the large crowd present were unanimous in pronouncing the feature picture, "Over The Garden Wall," one of the most charming they had ever seen. "The Exiled Chief," tells in a very interesting way the story of the expulsion of the Seminole Indians from Florida, to make way for the white men. It presents the red man's life, his wrongs, his griefs and heart longings. "The Outcast's Sacrifice," is a dramatic film of more than ordinary merit and the comedy element is plentifully supplied by "The Witch's Donkey." Mr. Winchester has a very pretty song, The Song that Lives Forever, which he sings in an effective manner. This will be his last week at the Gem.

Athletic

Tom Eck, under whose direction all the principal long distance running races of recent years in Canada have been decided, is anxious to arrange a race between four runners who are now in Canada and four men picked from any other country in the world. This is Eck's proposition to the Boston Herald:

Dear Sir—Knowing that New York and vicinity are full of short distance and Marathon runners from all parts of the world, and that there are some races coming off and not a Canadian entry as a starter, I would like the New York public to know there are a few good runners up here in Canada, and I hereby issue this challenge. I will bring Fred Meadows and Abbie Wood, Alfred Shrubb and Hawk (Indian), or Percy Sellen and run them in a 20-mile relay team race, two men on each team, against any four picked men of the world, and will run any time between July 10 and 15, men to be allowed to relieve each other at any time during the race.

Yours very truly,

TOM ECK.

JEFFRIES NO MATCH FOR NEGRO

Johnson Practically Knocks Out Old Champion

ONE-SIDED ALL THE WAY

Colored Man Has Not a Scratch Save Cut in Lip—Jeffries Down Three Times in 15th Round, Seconds Throw up the Sponge

Reno, Nev., July 4—John Arthur Johnson, a Texas negro, the son of an American slave, is tonight the first and undisputed heavyweight champion of the world.

James J. Jeffries, of California, winner of 22 championship fights, the man who never was brought to his knees before by a blow, passed tonight into history as a broken idol. He met utter defeat at the hands of the black champion.

While Jeffries was not actually counted out, he was saved from this crowning shame only by his friends pleading with Johnson not to hit the fallen man again, and the towel was brought into the ring from his corner. At the end of the 15th round Referee Tex Rickard raised the negro's arm and the great crowd filed out glum and silent.

Jeffries was dragged to his corner, bleeding from his nose and mouth and a dozen cuts on his face. He had a black, closed eye, and swollen features and he held his head in his hands dazed and incoherent.

Johnson walked out of the ring without a mark on his body except a slight cut on his lip, which was the opening of a wound received in training.

Ring experts agree that it was not even a championship fight. Jeffries had a chance in the second round, perhaps, but after the sixth it was plain that he was weakening and was out-classed at every point, and after the 11th round it was hopeless.

After the third round, Johnson, treated his opponent almost as a joke. He smiled and blocked playfully, warding off the bear-like rushes of Jeffries with marvellous skill.

With the exception of a few rounds the fight was tame. Jeffries did not have the power to hurt Johnson after he had received blow after blow on the jaw and his strength was ebbing. But even before this stage, Jeffries could not reach the black. The blows nearly always landed, minus nearly all their speed. It was like hitting a punching bag.

clinch after Jeffries had failed to land on the body. Johnson cut loose and before the spectators were prepared for the finish he had sent Jeffries down with lightning like left and right blows on the jaw. Jeffries slipped and fell halfway through the ropes on the west side of the ring. Those under him saw that he had lost his sense of surroundings and that the faces at the ringside were a blank to him. His time had come. He was feeling what he had caused others to feel in the days of his youth and power.

Johnson came over to the spot and stood poised over his adversary ready for a left hook if Jeffries regained his feet.

Jim Corbett, who stood in Jeffries' corner all during the fight, telling Johnson what a fool he was and how he was in for the beating of his life, now ran forward with outstretched arms crying, "Oh, don't, Jack; don't hit him."

Jeffries painfully raised himself to his feet. His jaw had dropped. His eyes were nearly shut and his face was covered with blood. With trembling legs and shielding arms he tried to defend himself but he could not stop a terrific right smash on the jaw, followed by two left hooks. He went down again. Jeffries' physician and other friends jumped into the ring.

"Stop it," they cried. "Don't put the old fellow out."

Sam Berger, Jeffries' manager, ran along the ring, calling to Bob Armstrong:

"Bring that towel—you know what I mean—don't let him get hit."

From Johnson's corner his seconds were calling to him to quit. Then the referee stopped the timekeeper and it was all over.

In an instant after the crowd realized that the fight was over, the ring was stampeded by a wild throng. The short end betting men were hilarious, but in the great mass of the spectators, there was a feeling of personal loss. Hope had lived in thousands of breasts until the last minute and now their idol had crumbled and this black man stood peerless. They could not help but admire him, however, and little animosity was shown toward him. For the most part, the people were silent, just readjusting things mentally. Hundreds had to swallow the bitter pill of heavy financial loss.

Reno, Nev., July 4—By Jack Johnson: "I won from Mr. Jeffries because I outclassed him in every department of the fighting game. Before I entered the ring I was certain I would be the victor. I never changed my mind at any time.

"Jeffries' blows had no steam behind them. So how could he hope to defeat me? With the exception of a slight cut on my lower lip, which was really caused by an old wound being struck, I am unmarked.

"One thing I must give Jeffries credit for is the game battle he made. He came back at me with the heart of a true fighter. No man can say he did not do his best.

"For the next few weeks I shall play in vaudeville. Then I shall go to my home in Chicago to rest. I do not think I shall fight for several months because I do not know a man now who could give me a good battle. No attention will be paid to Sam Langford's challenge to me, as I do not consider he could give me a fight that would draw."

Reno, Nev., July 4—By James J. Jeffries: "I lost my fight this afternoon but did not have the snap of youth I used to have. I believed in my heart that the old dash was there, but when I started to execute, the speed and youthful stamina were lacking. The things I used to do were impossible. For instance, I used to shoot in a right hand body punch, a sort of short range blow that never used to fail me. But when I tried it today the snap was not there, and it was only a love tap.

"Six years ago the result would have been different; but now—well, I guess the public will let me alone after this."

Sir Caspar Purdon Clarke has resigned from the post which he had occupied for nearly five years as director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and the trustees accepted his resignation with sorrow and adopted a resolution in praise of his faithful service and his devotion to the highest ideals. His letter, sent to London, in which he relinquished his relations with the board of trustees, was exceedingly brief and, as given out by the secretary of the institution, contains no message of farewell nor any expression of personal regret.

DOGS AS POLICEMEN

Crime in Paris, Berlin and Brussels Has Decreased 35 Per Cent. by Use of Police Dogs

It is now many years since Continental nations realized the advantages to be gained by employing dogs in ordinary police work. As the subject in all its different branches is one of which I have made a life-long study, I may be allowed, perhaps, to speak with some degree of authority on the valuable work which these sagacious animals are doing throughout, practically, the whole of Europe.

Some eighteen months ago I went abroad and made a careful study of the systems at the training establishments in Germany, France and Belgium, and I came away convinced that the effect of dogs with the police is to decrease crime enormously.

In Paris, Berlin and Brussells, as well as six other towns on the continent, the authorities testify to the fact that crime has decreased by no less than thirty-five per cent. since the introduction of police dogs. So pleased are the municipal authorities of Berlin that only a few weeks ago they voted the sum of 27,000 marks (£1,350) for the increase of the training establishments in that city.

Burglaries Cease

In Brunswick, during the month of January, 1903, there were thirteen burglaries, in February twelve, in March and April seven. Nine months later, through the introduction of police dogs, there were no burglaries, and the animals were moved out towards the suburbs, where fruit is largely grown, the trees and shrubs affording welcome "cover" for the undesirables, and this had the effect of lowering a number of thefts itnm te ohsrpsudluu a number of thefts in the most surprising manner. The report of the inspector states that not only have the number of crimes against property diminished, but also that charges of assault on the police have practically disappeared.

A word or two about the dogs themselves. The character possessed by the different breeds is clearly defined by Nature herself, but to embody the necessary traits in one animal was at first no easy matter. Very large and very small dogs were put on the running at once. St. Bernards and Newfoundlands have too much weight of their own to carry to be sufficiently active.

For saving life in the water the Newfoundland, of course, is splendid, but this qualification is hardly the business of the ordinary police dog. Great Danes are in some way an exception to the rule, as they are both powerful and active, while small dogs are without sufficient size and speed.

Setters, pointers and greyhounds are too much inclined to go after game; bulldogs are useless, so we must come down to the sheep dog and Airedale. The latter used much in France, Germany and Austria, while the former cannot be ignored, as he possesses very sharp senses, and will not attack without reason. With little training a sheep dog can track a fresh line of scent; he possesses wonderful hearing, and it is quite a mistake to say he is devoid of "nose."

The best police dogs, however, are a mixture of sheep dog, Airedale and retriever, and well-trained animals of this kind can be obtained for from three to five pounds.
