A TOMAHAWK BUT NOT TECUM SEH'S.

Sarah L. Russel, who lives with her daughter, Mrs. E. H. Betts, at 1413 East Sixteenth street, Kansas City, thinks she has the tomahawk carried by Technisch when he was killed at the battle of the Thames in October, 1813.

Col. William Russel, the founder of Russelville, Ky., who commanded the Kentucky contingent in the famous battle, was permitted by Gen. Harrison, so it is claimed, to remove the tomahawk from the dead body of Tecumseh and retain it and it has been in the possesssion of the Russel family ever since.

"Remove the tomakawk" is a nice way of putting it, but if it was "removed" it is tolerably certain it was not Tecumsen's. Reminiscences of men who were on the scene tell us that after the flight of General Proctor and the defeat of the Indians at Moraviantown it is said the Kentucky horse found the body of a big Indian on the field. From its size they assumed it was that of Tecumseh. They skinned the body and when then they went back home they boasted that their whiplashes were made of the great chieftain's hide. Is it to be presumed that General Harrison was also asked for permission to skin the body as well as rob the corpse.

We know, however, from settlers around here at the time and not long dead, that Tecumseh's body was carried off by his braves and secretly buried and to this day no white man has ever learned its resting place, and probably

THE MAN OF THE HOUR.

It was on March 28, 1879, after the retreat from Isandlana, that Redvers Buller gained the Victoria Cross, says the Westminster Gazette. He had been making one of his intrepid reconnaissances, when his men were suddenly surprised by the approach of a large number of Zulus. It was necessary to retire. But never for a moment did Buller lose his coolness and calmness. The Zulus came down the hill in hot pursuit. Man after man fell before their assegais, or was buried Buller rescued him from his assailants, placed him on the back of his horse, trooper, whose doom seemed assured, the enemy was within a hundred yards of their prostrate victim. For this almost superhuman feat he now hears the coveted bronze badge.

Sir Redvers Buller comes of an old it he might have lived the life of a country gentleman. But he early de- head and this is construed by the Kencided otherwise, and was wearing the Queen's uniform at nineteen: "Eagles do not catch flies" is the proud moito speaking of Buller's achievements in the Zulu war, says :-

"Here was a man with some six thousand a year, a beautiful house in fair Devon waiting for his occupation; a seat in Parliament all but secured, and yet for the patriotic love of leading thatistrange medley of reckless adventurers he was living squalidly in the South African veldt, sleeping in the open for three nights out of the six with a single blanket thrown over his body; his hands so disfigured by cattle sores, the curse of the veldt that I never saw them not bandaged up. With his intrepid heroism he had saved the lives of so many of his men that in talking to them, it almost seemed that he had saved all their lives. A strange, stern, strong-tempered man, whose pride it seemed to be to repress all his own emotion and to smother its display in others, he would order a man peremptorily back to his duty who came into his tent to ask him to read a letter in which a mother thanked him for saving the life of her

THE NAMES THE DEAD.

We're Irish; they said we'd not fight For the Queen. Was that right? Ask for the names of the women who cried For the heroes who charged to the cannon and died-So ask for the names of the dead.

Our brothers are dead in the Transvaal-English and Scotchmen-and is that all Who died that the whole world might know That watered by blood, the Empire would grow ? Go ask for the names of the dead.

We've drunk to the Queen-God bless her !! We've fought with the Boers-who curs'd her! And we're Britons! We're true to the flag! When the fighting was on did one of us lag? Go ask for the names of the dead.

English, and Scotchmen, and Irish-all Britons yet; When we fail, there'll be rooms in the Empire to let, We have wrongs! we are poor -God knows! but we'll wait Like Fusiliers, not traitors, we'll fight against fate. Go look at the names of the dead.

We'll pray for the names of the honored dead; We'll drink to the Empire the dying has made. It's their blood and our blood the banner has stained; It's their land and our land the dying has gained. Go pray for the souls of the dead.
