KEEP GOING

It was very little rest we got on such nights as these. It was bad enough having to keep all our equipment on, with a hundred rounds of aumunition in the pouches, without the rain. Then we had to take our turn keeping a strict watch, in the event of getting a night attack. The Dervishes fied from the villages as soon as they sighted us coming, and made for Omdurnan, so we have properly cleared the country for the time being. We reached Kereri on Sept. 1st, and sighted the Dervishe outposts, who retired with the news to the Khalifa that we were only a few mites outside.

We marched to within five miles of Omdurnan, and halted at mid-day for some refreshment, for we had been on the move since four that morning. We had only just had a drink of tea and biscuit, and had just settled down, when the news came in that a large army was advancing towards us, above 40,000 strong. So that changed the arder of things altogether. I can assure you. In an hour's time we were all out and formed in battle formation, ready to receive them. The country was very open, so our cavalry had no difficulty in keeping them in sight. We waited all the afternoon under a soorching sun, but they did not come up as I expected, their intentions being to attack us at night. We waited and watched for their coming all night taking turn about every hour. However, with the moon being so clear, and bats, they did not come, but made fresh plans for an ptack at daybreak. Had they come, it would have been an than the previous one. The native troops (Egyptian and Soudaness) being nearest them, had to get into line under a very heavy fire at close quarters, and the first British brigade and adit anoed on to Omdurman, to prevent the Khalifa or fugitives from getting in. This action lasted about five hours. They charged the native troops with espears with great determination, but were cut up as fast as they came; they (the Soudanese, etc.,) stood their ground splendidly; the Baggara horsemen charged them, and riderless horses were soon seen galloping in all directions, bullets were flying pretty thick from all quigiters, and the sights we saw were seen so seen galloping in all directions, bullets were flying pretty thick from all quigiters, and the sights we saw were seen get into some very tight places. They made a dash at a mob, thinking there were only a few hundreds, but they were hiding in this valley in thourands. The Dervishes stood their ground, and, after the Lancers cut through them, they found they were surrounded, and had to make a dash for liberty. The poor fellows did exceedingly well, but lost heavily, about 18 being killed and over 40 wounded, the Dervishes dragging them from their horses. How Many Women

Of your acquaintance wear shoes that cost more than $3 00?

Not many-we'il wager. And why should they pay more than $3 oc?

Time was when it was necessary to have shoes made to order, so as to get a fit. That time's gone by. We only ask about half the good shoemaker's price. Not more than $3. At $3, $2 and $1 50, we can sell you a perfect shee.

in a filthy condition, and living in awful dens. How they did cheer us as we marched in.

I went over he see the Dervish prisoners as they were brought in, and I saw some sights I can never forget. Their jibhas and bits of rags were saturated with blood. What a sight they did look, shot in all parts of the body. Their loss must be something like 20,000. The transport went out two days after the battle with water and biscuits for the Morrell (of Knaresbro') went with them. They were that far gone that water they drank killed some of them, others threw it all up again.

There were men aiting shere with some of their limbs shot away; they must have been in awful agony, but they are only suffering what they made others suffer.

The Khalifa got away, but was wounded; his son was killed, and I think Osman Digna is also dead. The day after the battle the Sirdar gave us and endurance of the troops in such a trying time.

This Woman is Accused of Killing Her Husband.

He Was Old and Rich-The Serva Ulri's Story of the Crime.

Battle Creek, Mich., Oct. 28.—The examination in the Sanderson murder case was opened yesterday morning, the court room of Justice Lewis being packed with people. Men were most prominent, but many women were present.

prominent, but many women were present.

Marie Robertson, the servant girl, who had so much to say before the arrest of Mrs. Sanderson, was called to the stand. She said she came here from Harper Hospital, Detroit, being engaged by Mrs. Sanderson, as house, the same here in the same here. She often, slept with Mrs. Sanderson, upstairs, the old man being downstairs.

Mrs. Sanderson confided in her and told of her husband's westth. Mrs. Sanderson said she could not bear to live with him and would kill him some day.

"Perhaps you think this awful, Marie, but I don't think anything more about it than eating my breakfast."

She ground the glass and put it in between the porridge which the old man ate. He took very sick, complained of indigestion, gradually grewworse, and then she abused him. There was nothing but quarreling until death came.
