A Secret for the Ladies.

Stephon A. West sued the Manhattan atter the same month last year; from the lat of February to date it is less favourable. Prices still keep very low without any prospect of improvement, and atocks generally (though less than last year) are far too heavy, especially on the eve of the new import and with our present limited demand.

Messrs. A. F. & D. Mackay, Liverpool, under date of May 4th, say:

Although the long-looked for "better times" in trade have not yet arrived, mercantile men, who eagerly soan the commercial barometer, think that a tendency to some improvement has set in. This is observable in shipping, in cotton, and other brauches of commerce. Unfortunately it does not extend to the timber trade. Here the depression has been long and continuous, and no signs of improvement are observable. How long this may last it is impossible to tell; but the present condition of things certainly gives no indication of an immediate change for the better. The stock is considerably less than in the corresponding period of last year, and very little is coming in. The consumption, too, is small—the demand being merely of the hand-to-mouth description, which is made by those who require it. There is no brisk demand, and trade is languid. The consumption of spruce deals, &c., for the month was 3,696, standards, as compared with 2,873 in 1884, and 3,978 in 1885. The volume of business during last month was small, and holders displayed great auxiety, to divest themselves of their stocks. In consequence, prices over all are scarcely so good as they were, though there is no item to which were in the stocks.

though there, is no item to which we can call special attention as having yielded much in value. The saw mills and retail yards are fairly busy, and the stocks there are rapidly diminishing. In the ship yards, to, stocks are at a minimum, there are rapidly diminishing. In the ship yards, too, stocks are at a minimum, and we are sanguine that, very soon, dealers and consumers will require to operate extensively—even for ordinary every-day supplies. Shipbuilders have not got much fresh work, though there are rumors that several large contracts are just on the eve of being fixed. House business dontinues dull, and general business is languid. North of Europe goods are moving off fairly well; but the principal dealers have made very limited purchases of goods for shipment during the season. So far, prices are similar to what they were a year ago.

Deals—The demand was unusually dull, and very few changed hands. Within the last day or two there has been more enquiry, and we anticipate a fair business during the month. Prices were about an average. There was no transaction of much importance to report. As to stocks, first quality are too plentiful; but thirds of standard sizes are exhausted, even oddments are net very heavy; fourth line are out of stock and so are Oneber.
