

Seroggins to share it with him. But poor Angelina though she has had beaux without number, she has also had a smoky fireplace to contend with, and the invariable result has been to scare the young man off after one evening's experience. Let anxious parents examine the fireplaces, and the chances are ten to one that there will be found the secret of their daughter's dangerous proximity to spinsterdom.

A new feature of winter wraps is their length—to be curtailed is to be behind the age, says the Toronto Saturday Night.

Fur and lace seems a strange combination in trimming, but is far from unlovely. I saw a dainty velvet gown of a rich green trimmed with vest and cuffs of Persian lamb fur, and finished at neck and wrists by a deep frill of antique lace. The bonnet to go with this gown was of green, bordered scantily with fur, and on top had an Alsatian bow of the rich old lace. The muff, a tiny round affair, was also trimmed with bands of fur, and had a full ruffie of lace on each opening. The costume was of singular elegance.

Another theatre waist caught my eye a few evenings ago, partly because of its novelty and partly because of its peculiarity. It was a long loose blouse of soft peach silk, with a deep yoke of open work applique and wide cuffs of the same. The applique was in gilt cord and braid, and was very handsome, though the loose and negligé appearance of the garment is not to my taste. Its handsome garniture could not impart that look of trimness and smartness so indispensable for a theatre gown. The girl who wore it was tall, slender, and a perfect brunette, with a languid grace and indifference which well suited her costume.

The "love spoon" is the latest development in the souvenir spoon fad, and is chosen for an engagement token. A silver arrow with enamelled forget-me-nots twined round the shaft, and its barbed point piercing the golden bowl of the spoon, which is in heart shape, is the appropriate design of this trifle, and the intertwined initials of the donor and recipient are engraved on the inner surface of the bowl.
