The 1984 films

Goldie Hawn (seen at left) was deserving of critical praise for her epic Dogs in Heat. The film took a hard look at how we perceive the tenuous relationship between dogs, people and politicians.

Dance of the Naked Goat, was the critically acclaimed screen translation of Agatha Christie's murder mystery. The film drew a record crowd in its ten-month run. Milo O'Shea (seen at far left) received an Academy nomination for his portrayal of the half-man half-goat sociopath.

The financial success of Columbia Pictures' The Story of an Older, More Vivacious Woman could mean a genre.
