

popular stopping place for the automobilist between the White Mountains and Montreal and Quebec.

One hundred and eighty-one miles east of Montreal lies a small station called Stark, a little distance from which passengers in the train have a fine view of those remarkable twin mountains called "Stark Peaks," generally considered to be the most symmetrical elevations of the whole New England mountain region.

Gorham is the gateway to the mountain region, and is a picturesque and thriving village situated in a broad and beautiful valley at the confluence of the Androscoggin and Peabody Rivers. The scenery in the vicinity of the village is remarkably striking, both in the vistas of the different mountain ranges and the isolated peaks which loom up at different points, and of the rivers and waterfalls. The range embracing Mounts Norwich, Carter and The Imp, in particular, is seen to great advantage. Mount Carter is one of the highest and Mount Norwich the most graceful of the White Hills in New Hampshire, and the best view of them is from the Alpine

House, situated at the station of the Grand Trunk Railway System. A noble range of hills rises up to view to the northwest of Gorham, and is known as the Pilot Range, while to the east is seen the Androscoggin Hills, which wall in the valley on that side. Mount Hayes (2,500 feet), directly behind the Alpine House, is the highest of these latter, and may be as-
