bound to visit so many cities in the Northwest that he had really very little Northwest that he had really very little time at his disposal. However, he prom-ised that on a future occasion ne would pay Rossland a visit which would be long-er and more in harmony with its deserts. He begged to thank the mayor and the citizens of Rossland for the very cordial reception that they had given him and at the same time, wiehed the compactive the same time wished to congratulate them on the progress that they had made in this city. He himself done a little in 1885 in the Northwest, to which kindly reference had been made. He was ieased at the spirit shown by Rossland and by Canada in general, and was sure that hinks such as these linked the whole Empire into closer union. It would emerge stronger out of the war than it had ever been before. Rossland would have its citizens back, he trusted in a short time, covered with the that they had gained on the field of war. Lord Minto in conclusion expressed his intention of paying this city a longer his return and begge visit on again to thank the mayor and the citizen
