A NEEDED WARNING.

The Brantford Expositor reiterates a warning against the indiscriminate filling up of the Northwest with alien races. It points out that the character of the original settlers determines the character of the population in the districts settled for many years afterwards. The extent to which the characteristics of the early settlers have been transmitted to those who have followed them is particularly noticeable in many parts of Ontario. Happily for us, the early settlers of this province were of the right kind. How different Ontario would be to-day had it been settled by the same class of people that are now being rushed in from Europe to fill up Western Canada.

There would not be so much cause for apprehension if the immigrants now being brought in were scattered over the Dominion. But, generally speaking, they come in as communities, and are located by themselves. The United States, with its large native population, has succeeded to a wonderful extent in assimilating the mass of emigrants that has reached its shores. Yet, even in the United States, the merging of the various elements has been far from complete. How much less complete will fusion be in the Northwest, where population is sparse, and where, under the system of settlement that is being followed, the new arrivals are isolated from even the two or three hundred thousand Canadians who now reside west of Lake Superior.

The social and political consequences that are likely to follow the bringing in of undesirable immigrants and admitting them to the national partnership, demand most serious consideration, but the cost incurred in bringing in the immigrants is also a serious matter. We are spending this year for the purposes of immigration $450,000. This is largely contributed by the farmers of Ontario, who derive not one cent's worth of benefit from it, but are, as a result, subjected to greater competition. The profit is shared by the C. P. R., which carries the immigrants, and the eastern manufacturers, who sell them goods. It is little wonder that when the estimates were under discussion Mr. Wilson and Dr. Sproule, both of whom represent agricultural constituencies, spoke up against a continuance of the present policy.

A PECULIAR ARGUMENT AGAINST CREMATION.

The American opponents and advocates of cremation are much interested just now in a statement which has been made by a distinguished chemist, to the effect that if cremation practice ever became a universal practice the world's supply of coal would speedily be exhausted. This chemist is Prof. Clemens Winkler, of Saxony, and his statement is the result of long study on this subject. The world's population, he says, consists of about 1,550,000,000 persons, and of these about 21,000,000 die every year. Now, if all these bodies were to be cremated, the amount of coal which would be used for this purpose would be, maintains, be 13,849,500, or, in round numbers, 15,000,000 tons.

Many years, however, he admits, are likely to elapse before the entire world decides to substitute cremation for the prevailing method of burial, and, therefore, instead of laying stress on what is likely to happen in this far distant time, he draws attention to certain statistics which are of more immediate interest. There are, he says, 160 cities in the world each of which has a population exceeding 100,000 and the aggregate population of which is 82,000,000.

The number of deaths in these cities amounts annually to 1,640,000, and if all these bodies were to be cremated the amount of coal required for this purpose each year would be 785,500 tons. That such a large quantity of coal should be consumed in this way seems to him highly undesirable, and he expresses the hope that encouragement will not be given to those who are in favor of using for the annihilation of dead bodies a most valuable material, and one of which the living may soon be in need if much of it is consumed in this way.

Die Flamme, the representative organ of the European cremation societies, does not agree with Professor Winkler. "Admitting," says the latter, "that the total population of the 160 greatest cities is 82,000,000, it is quite true that the average number of deaths each year will be one and two-third millions, and it is also true that about half a ton of coal will be required to consume each body of an adult, provided the furnace has to be specially heated in each case. Prof. Winkler apparently assumes that as much coal is required to consume a child's body as an adult's, which is manifestly absurd, and that whenever a body is to be cremated the furnace has to be specially heated for the occasion. As a matter of fact, in the largest crematories at present, the furnaces are always heated, and thus the amount of coal required to con-same a body is hardly one-tenth of what it would be under other circumstances.

Finally, Die Flamme claims that the amount of coal which is now, or which is likely to be, used in crematories is insignificant compared with the amount which is used for industrial purposes, and that the value of the coal used in crematories is by no means as great as the value of the wood used in coffins.

Suppose the citizens give the board of works a chance on that new vitrified brick pavement before passing judgment on it.

Any expense incurred in chopping down G. N. W. poles will be money well laid out in the way of educating the great corporations up to the fact that the people have at least some few rights left.

If the board of health persists in creating the honorable office of chairman of chicken coops, we beg to nominate our esteemed fellow citizen, Sen. Bannister, for the position.

If the Manson Campbell Company removes to Walkerville, Ald. Fleming and Ald. Liddy will have proved the two most expensive members ever elected to the council.

After the exhibition it has made of itself in the Colborne street, spur matter the property committee could easily revive its waning popularity throughout the city by quietly signing its own death warrant to the bottom of a resignation to the city council.

Three hundred and fifty Roumanian Jews, who arrived at Montreal on the S. S. Lake Champlain, have been detained on board because they had no means, and the government will not allow the immigration of paupers. All of which proves that the Conservative members in the house of commons who protested against the importation of paupers into this country had good ground for the course they took.

The Manson Campbell Company is paying too much attention to a lot of senseless kicking. The company should not hold the citizens at large responsible for the acts of a few.

The Great Northwestern Telegraph Company may think itself big enough and wealthy enough to bluff this city into permitting its main street, already too narrow, to be obstructed by a lot of unsightly old poles, but perhaps it will find its mistake. The G. N. W. is wealthy, because it has paid nothing for a valuable public franchise and has used the public highways of the country free of charge as if it owned them. As far as Ontario is concerned public opinion has reached a stage which will soon change all this. The next legislature ought to be sufficiently free from corporation influence to authorize the municipalities to collect rental for the use of their highways from telegraph and other companies.

Confession of Crime by Hypnotism.
Public interest has been aroused recently on this question by the extortion of a confession from a thief by means of hypnotism.

A confession of crime obtained in this way may or may not be a valid one. It is not necessarily infallible, any more than a voluntary confession would be. It would have to be verified by other evidence before it could be seriously considered.

Hypnotism will not make a liar instantly and veraciously. It is a very common opinion that a hypnotist can completely capture the mind of his patient without his consent, and discover all the secrets of his past life. Hypnotism only gives us a means whereby we can the more readily get at the divine man within. It is not so much a key to the door of a man's mind as a more effectual way of ridding the door-bell and entering with the occupant.

Generally speaking, a strong-willed man may still keep his criminal secrets in spite of all influences, hypnotic or otherwise. As a rule criminals are very hard to hypnotize, because they set their whole nature against the hypnotist, and when a man is under the influence of hypnotism it is impossible to do anything with him. There is no doubt that hypnotism can and will be used to detect crime. But we are only on the threshold of knowledge in this direction, and no one can set limits to the future of hypnotism in overcoming the obstinacy of criminals. The time may come when the old, ineffectual methods of punishing the moral nature will be superseded by hypnotic treatment. The astonishing results already attained prove this beyond question.

By hypnotism we can reach people who are moral imbeciles, and by no other power known to man can you do this.

We can discover the sense of right and wrong where none seemed to exist. We can overcome evil habits and awaken the higher self which never completely dies in any man or woman. Where every other influence has failed to restore a man to moral sanity, hypnotism has succeeded. So I would say that if it fails to extract a confession from a criminal no other means can be used with success. There is such a thing as compulsory hypnotism, which can be applied to any person without his consent. It is possible to break a china vase against a rock. But this is a new and almost undeveloped field, about which little can be said at present.

BIRDS THAT SHAVE THEMSELVES.

Man is said to be the only creature that shaves. But this is not so. A South American bird called the "mot-mot" actually begins shaving on arriving at maturity. Naturally adorned with long blue tail feathers, it is not satisfied with them in their natural state, but with its beak nips off about two inches, leaving a neat little oval tuft at the end of each.

MATCHES.
