A. McINNIS,
Sackville, April 30, 1876.

Her Treasures.

I keep them in the old, old box That Willie gave me years ago. The time we parted on the rocks; His ship lay swinging to and fro. At waiting in the Lower Bay. I thought my heart would break that day!

The picture with the pensive eyes Is Willie's? No dear, that's young Blake.

Who took the West Point highest prize? He went half crazy for my sake. Here are a lot of rhymer he wrote, And here's a button of his coat.

Is this his ring? My dearest May, I never took a ring from him!

This was a gift from Howard Clay, Just see—the pearls are getting dim. Just say that pearls are tears—what stuff!

The setting looks a little rough. He was as handsome as a prince— And jealous! But he went to Rome Last fall. He's never written since. I used to visit at his home— A lovely place beyond Fort Lee; His mother thought the world of me!

Oh, no. I sent his letters back. These were a gift from Washington. But look, what a tremendous pack! He always wrote me three for one. I know I used to treat him mean. Poor Jack—he fell at Chancellorsville.

The vignettes—all that lot—are scalps I took in London, Naples, Nice, At Paris, and among the Alps: Those foreign lovers act like geese. But dear, they are such handsome men. We go to France, next year, again!

This is the doctor's signet ring. These faded flowers? Oh, let me see: Why, what a very curious thing! Who could have sent these flowers to me?

Ah! now I have it—Count de Twirl; He married that fat Croisie girl.

His hair was red. You need not look So sadly at that raven tress. You know the head that lock forever! But most because—don't get so wild! I have not laid him on the shelf— Life's not a bygone. In a year I'll tell you all about him, dear.

—Scribner For December.

A Sort Word.

—The art of saving an unpleasant thing in a perfectly agreeable manner, is a very high accomplishment, which should be studied by all persons liable to be asked for loans. Some years ago there was a banking-house in Edinburgh which gave general offence by the rude way that customers were sometimes addressed. A tradesman leaving a bill for discount, would on his return have the bill thrown across the table, with the supercilious and loud remark: "We don't know the parties." Tradesman retired affronted.

"What a man," says more apologies, said he, "if you got into the middle of the street and stand in my way, that's your look out, not mine."

Proceeding on his journey again, and becoming angry and dizzy, he seemed to be entangled in an intricate labyrinth of telegraph poles, which led him to make a general speech.

"Gentlemen, you are not doing the fair thing. You did not give a man a fair chance. If you run from the other side of the street to the other, right in my way."

Just then he met a friend, and taking him by the hand he said: "There is a procession going along the street, and every man is drunk; they have been running against me all the way from the club. I knocked one of the fellows down, and then a lot of them got around me, and I believe they would have kicked me within an inch of my life if you had not come to the rescue. Let us go out of this street before the procession comes back for they are all drunk."

BAYARD TAYLOR tells of a Yankee who, walking through the streets of St. Petersburg one muddy day, met the Grand Duke Constantine. The sidewalk was not wide enough for two to pass, and the street was very deep in filth. The American took a silver ruble from his pocket, shook it in his gloved hand, and cried out, "Crown not coin?" "Crown," guessed the Grand Duke. "Your Highness has won," cried the American, looking at the ruble, and stepping into the mud. The next day the Yankee was invited by the Grand Duke to dinner.

THERE are 146,000, drinking-saloons, 128,000 school-houses, and 54,000 church buildings in the United States. The manufacturers and sellers of spirituous liquors number about 560,000. It is estimated that in the saloons there are 5,000,000 daily customers, one-seventh of the entire population. Of these 100,000 are annually tried for crimes committed under the influence of liquor. The 29,000 distilleries make annually 72,500,000 gallons of ardent spirits.

STINGY AUNT. "Well Robin, have you enjoyed yourself?"

Robin. "Oh yes, aunt; but I wish I had come. Brother Jim is sure to cry 'Halves' when I get home, and when I say you didn't give me nothing, he'll punch my head for a story."

THERE are now in the world, in full legal tender money—in gold coin and bank bill—$750,000,000; in legal tender silver in Europe and elsewhere, $235,000,000; in legal tender in the East, $250,000,000; and in silver subsidiary coin, $250,000,000.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON, in his latest book, says, "I have heard with admiring submission the experience of the lady who declared that 'sense of being perfectly well dressed gives a feeling of inward tranquillity which religion is powerless to bestow.'"

A girl in Berks county, Pennsylvania, only twelve years old, rises daily at four a. m., milks thirteen cows, and prepares a breakfast for the family. Her hair isn't "bandaged," and she doesn't wear a one-legged dress.

A Heartless Villain.

A man named Courbalon is before a Paris Court, charged with the death of his wife under extraordinary circumstances. He discovered an intimacy existing between her and a certain Partridge. Partridge fled, impelled by several vigorous kicks, and the lady implored pardon. "Pardon, oh, yes," replied Courbalon in a sinister tone. The next day, at noon, the servants placed on the table six roasted partridges, which in France are much larger than in the United States. As soon as his wife sat down he looked the door, and drew from his pocket a revolver. "Madam," he said, "the hour for your punishment has come. You have dishonored me by means of a man named Partridge, and here are six of his namesakes for you to dine on. You will please eat them to the last morsel. If you cease doing so, or, if you give an alarm, I will blow your brains out!" The unhappy woman, feeling the impossibility of accomplishing the task without killing herself, fell on her knees and implored his pity. Courbalon's only reply was to cock his revolver, and she therefore commenced her task. "I forgot to say that I forbid you drinking while you eat," said Courbalon. The poor woman, after finishing the second partridge, showed signs of illness. She lifted her eyes to her husband with an imploring expression, but he pointed the pistol inexorably at her head. In two hours and a half the six birds were eaten; at 9 o'clock that night the poor woman died of indigestion.

The Way Telegraph Poles Strike some People.

A merchant going home elevated staggered against a telegraph pole. "Beg your pardon," said he. "I hope no offense. It's rather dark and the street is very narrow you see."

A few minutes he came in contact with another pole.

"Couldn't help it, sir," said he, lifting his hat. "I never saw such crooked lanes as we have here in this city."

Again he ran afoul of a pole, this time with a force that sent him backward to the ground.

"Look here, neighbor, you needn't push a fellow down because he happens to touch you; the road is as much mine as yours, and I have as much right here as you have, old stick in the mud."

He picked himself up and made another effort to reach home, and soon he came plump against another pole.

"What a man," says more apologies, said he, "if you got into the middle of the street and stand in my way, that's your look out, not mine."

Proceeding on his journey again, and becoming angry and dizzy, he seemed to be entangled in an intricate labyrinth of telegraph poles, which led him to make a general speech.

"Gentlemen, you are not doing the fair thing. You did not give a man a fair chance. If you run from the other side of the street to the other, right in my way."

Just then he met a friend, and taking him by the hand he said: "There is a procession going along the street, and every man is drunk; they have been running against me all the way from the club. I knocked one of the fellows down, and then a lot of them got around me, and I believe they would have kicked me within an inch of my life if you had not come to the rescue. Let us go out of this street before the procession comes back for they are all drunk."
