On Dress Reform.

By RUTH CAMERON.

Someone wants to know if I believe in the dress reform movement with its work toward a single uniform style for women. I believe in dress reform, but not that kind. On the contrary, their idea, as I understand it, is to submerge the individual in a universal style. Now I should like to see the individual emerge and become a larger factor in the dress situation. I want more variety instead of less.

More Individuality Rather Than Less.

A universal style would be too monotonous. Variety is the salt and spice of life. We need salt and spice. Then it would be too mechanical. It would crowd out self-expression, and to my mind, dress is one of the right and natural forms of self-expression for a woman (for a man, too, but that's another story and too long to begin here. Another day). She has no right to devote time and thought and money that she owes to other things to dress, but within reasonable limits, the selection of clothes that express and bring out her best self is a healthy outlet for the creative instinct in women. It isn't artists alone, you know, that have the creative instinct. I would like to see every woman adopt an individual personal style. And by that I don't necessarily mean anything so radical as one definite pattern after which she will have all her gowns made. My idea for the average woman is that she study herself and find out what particular lines and colors are most becoming to her and stick reasonably close to them. Trying Not to be Beguiled by Ubiquitous Fashions

For instance, if you'll excuse the egotism, I'll take my own case because I know something about it. After years of study and experiment I have discovered that I look best in a short waistline, a V rather than a square neck, a broad girdle above the waistline, a full skirt, and for colors light blue and brown. Now I am trying to keep to that ideal and not to be beguiled too far away from it by any style, however alluring.

I don't mean that I shall make a pattern along these lines and have all my dresses made by it, or that I shall not permit myself any variations which prove becoming, or refuse to avail myself of any dainty new quirks of fashion. I simply mean that I shall try to make that my general ideal.

She Browses Around the Shops

One of the most attractively dressed girls I know has very little money to spend on her clothes. But she has a genius for browsing around the shops and finding things that look as if they grew on her. Girls with much more money are always envying the effects she produces. For instance, we admired a natty little Norfolk suit of natural corduroy. "My dear," she explained, "that cost me $11 and I've worn it three years. How did I get it for that? Why I bought the coat in a boys' furnishing shop and had the skirt made to match by a pattern I designed myself."

"My clothes needn't be up to the mark in fashion nor of expensive material, but they must look like me," is her motto.

It is another way of saying "must express my personality." I recommend it to all women for their consideration.

Wednesday—The Million Dollar.

Lachute, Que., 25th Sept. 1908. Minard's Liniment Co., Limited. Gentlemen,—Ever since coming home from the Boer war I have been bothered with running fever sores on my legs. I tried many salves and liniments; also doctored continuously for the blood, but got no permanent relief, till last winter when my mother got me to try MINARD'S LINIMENT. The effect of which was almost magical. Two bottles completely cured me and I have worked every working day since.

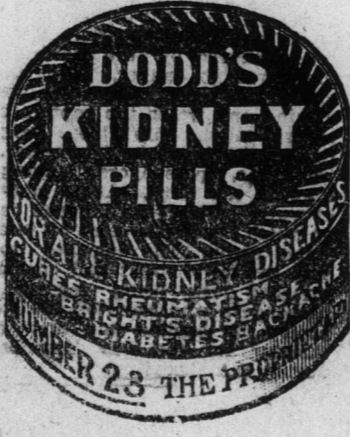

Yours gratefully,
JOHN WALSH.

Old Landmark Passes Away.

Miss Nora Keating, a much respected and esteemed old landmark of the East End, passed into her eternal rest on Saturday afternoon last. Though she had reached an advanced age, having exceeded the allotted span by almost a score of years, death came unexpectedly, as deceased had possessed all her faculties up to the last. It seems that she was stricken with a paralytic or fainting fit and fell, being found lifeless in her bedroom by a lady boarder of the house. Medical and spiritual aid was summoned, but without avail, as the final summons had come several hours previously. Miss Keating taught school for a great number of years and many of the old boys will regret her passing. The late Miss Sarah Keating, Matron of the Penitentiary, and the late James Keating, waterman, a brother. Deceased has no relatives here now, and typical of his benevolence Mr. Nicholas J. Vinnicombe is attending to the burial arrangements. The funeral took place this afternoon from her late residence York Street.

America in Favor of Arbitration.

May Have Important Bearing Upon the Question of Neutral Commerce.

Washington, Aug. 17.—On its face dealing with a single case the importance of which could be measured in a comparatively small number of dollars, the American note to the German Foreign Office, made public to-day, in regard to the destruction of the sailing ship William P. Frye, by a German auxiliary cruiser may have results most important in their bearing upon the whole question of the treatment of neutral commerce by the European belligerents.

The United States acquiesces in the German proposal that a joint board of experts fix the value of the Frye, which will be promptly paid for by the German Government. This was the original American proposition.

But the far-reaching effect of the note comes in the acceptance of the German offer to arbitrate "the question of legal justification" for the sinking of the Frye, in so far as that involves the interpretation of the existing treaties with Germany. If the German Government agrees to arbitration in the form suggested, it is believed here that the American Government will be in a position to address itself to Great Britain with greater force than it has heretofore been able to exert in advocacy of the general freedom of legitimate neutral commerce on the high seas.

In the State Department's view this will be particularly true if Germany accepts the last suggestion in the Frye note, and agrees to suspend, during the arbitration, at least, its policy of destroying American ships carrying contraband.

Girl Fire Bug

IN ONTARIO TOWN. Toronto, August 15.—Fourteen fires which took place in the Kirk Hill Presbyterian Church and manse, within a period of forty-eight hours, throwing the whole neighbourhood of Alexandria into a state of feverish excitement, have been accounted for by the admission of twelve year old Winnifred McMillan, daughter of J. D. McMillan, who has been living on the church premises during the absence on vacation of the pastor, Rev. A. Morrison.

Stories of German plots were associated with the fires, and when a vigilance committee of one hundred or more failed to put a stop to the fire outbreaks, Inspector John Miller, of the Ontario police, was sent for to get at the bottom of the whole business. Suspicion rested early upon the girl, but it appeared from the investigation that she was on hand in almost every case, and made discovery of the blaze before it had made much headway. A series of other depredations on church property have also been admitted by the girl.

Wedding Balls

MITCHELL-BAIRD.

(Montreal Mail, Aug. 14th.)

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Thursday afternoon at the Presbyterian Church, Dorchester, when Miss Etienne Baird, daughter of Mr. J. C. Baird, of St. John's, Newfoundland, and granddaughter of late Hon. James Baird, became the wife of Mr. Harrington L. Mitchell, of the Royal Bank of Canada, Montreal. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. I. A. Montgomery. The bride, who was given away by Mr. G. S. Sara, was robed in white satin with lace train and veil, and carried a shower of white roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Debra Baird, who was attired in a dress of pink chiffon, and carried sweet-williams. The groom was later held at residence of Mr. Sara, on Sussex Street. Among the relatives present from Montreal was the bride's mother, Mrs. J. C. Baird, of St. John's, N.B., and Mrs. Mitchell have gone to Quebec, whence they are leaving on motor tour through Maine and Brunswick.
