The ROYAL STORES, Limited

"Man and Maid" Real Love Tale

Latest Elinor Glyn Picture Thrilling Romance of War Hero.

The sets as well as the people are real in Elinor Glyn's Metro-Golwyn Mayer production of "Man and Maid," which is coming to the Nickel Theatre on Monday. Madame Glyn in writing her novels puts in real life characters and actual incidents. Then in bringing her stories to the screen she transcribes them accurately and casts exactly as to type.

The heroine in "Man and Maid" was a tall, slender, tragic-eyed blonde, a close friend of Madame Glyn's. Harriet Hammond looked identically like the original, so she was given the role, her point conclusively when he was shown that she had been away from the screen for two years and previous to that time had only been connected with pictures as a player of small parts.

Low Cody was so exactly like the Madame Glyn at all times. Miss hero of Madame Glyn's tale that she Desmond had not thought of going couldn't resist taking him for the part. Into pictures, but was used to that time that he the particular part of Odette in "Man and Maid" because she was so like the girl of that name, whom Madame Glyn had known and written about. And so with the sets as with the cast, Madame Glyn has some specific place in mind when she writes about them and in bringing her stories to the screen insists upon exact replicas of the locations she has written about.
