When he returned to St. Petersburg Gapon admits that he communicated with Count Witte, who gave him permission to live here, considering that his work was constructive and not destructive. Gapon concludes with an expression of his firm conviction that history will lemonstrate that "the unfrocked oope" lived for his country to the last drop of his blood, and died a sentinel Woods, of Macon, Mo., was stabbed three over the rights and liberties of the times by a convict, and died instantly. workmen and oppressed. The letter made a good impression, but Gapon's sincerity is sneeringly attacked by the Russ, which calls Gapon a friend of General Fullon, former chief of police of St. Petersburg, and a pensioner of Count Witte.
